honorable aspirations for the future. During the past year we have added new provinces to our Dominion, established seats of government in them and given into the hands of their people the task of administering their own local affairs. There are doubting Thomases in Canada who have been quite free in expressing their misgivings as to the ultimate political development of the new forces that have thus been established. The progress of the new region is unquestionable, and the influence of the newcomers who are settling like ants upon the land and are causing it to produce in unprecedented abundance, upon the material welfare of the older porting unit in the economic communcommunities, both east and west, is also apparent; but the question is asked whether the large foreign element will remain content with present political affiliations, and if it is not in- grants to property will be swept away evitable that this alien element must cherish aspirations out of harmony with the views of the older Canadian and toils of their less fortunate fellowcommunities, and, in the natural course of events, strive to set up a separatist movement. While we have no sympathy whatever with mountebanks and demagogues who are too lazy to perform an nest day's work, and yet who rave about the oppression of the "common people" and cry aloud for shedding of ood and revolution, yet we must admit the entertainment of a certain feeling of satisfaction when we read of the bloated capitalist, the frenzied financier and the gross materialist "getting his bumps." The economic system of the world is not perfect by any means, and it is farther from per fection in countries in which the people have been persuaded to adopt a informed of the nature of a recent fiscal system that creates conditions favorable to the accumulation of great fortunes, at the direct expense others. The work done by the various bodies was favorably commented on by several of those in attendance. It was evident from the remarks of some of these that the coming year will require increased expenditures for hospital work. The sentiment was expressed, particularly by Bishop Perrin, that a stage had been reached where greater Dr. S. D. Pope. outlays would be demanded in connection with the institution.

Mayor Morley thought the reports showed that the institution was well run. Care seemed to have been exercised in conducting the hospital's affairs in an economic way. He thought a fitting compliment to the retiring directors would be to re-elect them for the ensuing year. He hoped during the year to give closer attention to this work than in the past.
