

Poetry

FABLESS IS A LOVING HEART.
Sunny eyes may lose their brightness;
Nimble feet forget their lightness;
Pretty hands turn to grey;
Hearst grow pale, and eyes be dim;
Paint the voice, and weak the limb;
But human youth and strength depart,
Fables is a loving heart.

Like the little mountain-flower,
Peeping forth in winter's hour.
When the summer's breath is fed,
And the winter's cold is dead;
So you and your charms are gone,
Brighter still doth blossom on
Despair's destroying dust,
The girl's kindly loving heart.

Ye world's wisdom old—
He who have the knowledge gold,
Doth this earth as lovely seem;
As it did in His' young dream,
Ere the world had erred over,
Feeling good and pure before—
Ye ye sold at Mammon's mart
The best yearnings of the heart.

Grand me, Heaven, my earnest prayer—
Whether life of ease or care—
Be the one to come to me,
That may bring me joy and cheer—
Loving thoughts and gentle words
Twined within my bosom's chords,
And that age may but impart
Riper freshness to my heart.

The following amusing circumstance is stated to have occurred at a ball given in Washington, recently. It was understood that every person was to dress in character, and an usher was stationed at the door of the ballroom, to announce to the company within, the different characters as they entered. Two young ladies appeared at the entrance.

"Your characters?" asked the usher a whisper.
We do not appear in costume, to-night said the two young ladies.

Two ladies without any characters, tawed our the usher at the top of his voice.

ASTRONOMICAL PUS.— When Sir William Hamilton removed from the Royal Academy he took with him the entire equatorial room, which our old and last planetary attendant evicted a waggon's member exclaimed, What! our sun's run wild? that must be a grand sun!

"There is no truth in 'm," said a lady in company, "they are like musical instruments, which sound a variety of tone." "In other words, reason," said a wit, who claimed to be the author of the paper.
