

TY COBB NOT ENTHUSIASTIC OVER STAGE

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 14.—Celebrities from various circles were at the track yesterday. "Curley" Brown was there so was "Ty" Cobb. They were the guests of the stewards during the afternoon and glad were they, for the little glass pagoda sheltered them from a drizzling rain that made things about as miserable as it is possible to imagine.

"Ty" Cobb, who knows about as much about baseball as the man who invented the game, apparently spent a pleasant afternoon at the races. He placed a very small wager on Suffrastat, as much on account of the name as anything else, and lost it. "I like horse racing," said he, "but I don't know much about it, but give me an automobile and a smooth track and I'll carry anybody along at a sixty or seventy miles an hour."

"How do you like acting and the show business?" he was asked. "I can't say that I am married to it," he answered. "I never will be an actor. I suppose I am what they term a ham in the business and I get nervous when called upon to make a certain speech. It doesn't seem the same sort of thing as ball playing. There's a heap of difference between picking up a bat and knocking out a home run in the presence of 20,000 people and being asked to make a speech while smothered in grease paint and dressed in very unbecoming togs. I am an actor because it pays, not because I am in love with it."

FORM REVERSALS HAVE CAUSED MANY SURPRISES

CAPT. SPRACKLING, BROWN, PASSING BALL; CAPT. MERCER, PENNSYLVANIA.

You may have two guesses to name the in the backfield discounts weight in the eastern football champion.

"That's easy," you say, "Yale or Princeton." Maybe you're right and again, perhaps you can guess again. The "experts" may fool you.

When you think it over you discover that the situation is more of a mix up than the Chinese rebellion. It looks like an Irish stew on close inspection.

Every big eastern eleven, save Princeton, has been defeated. Yale from Princeton, Pennsylvania, Penn. State and Brown.

Not one of the "big four" has an unscathed goal line. Harvard smothered Brown, despite predictions.

Harvard lost to Princeton. Pennsylvania lost to Penn State, Carle and Brown.

Yale has beaten Colgate and New York university, unimpressively.

GIPLING NOT MUCH OF A POET.

Capt. G. Knox, one of the heroes of Rudyard Kipling's Rhyme of the Three Sealers, who is in the Chinese customs service as harbor master at Tonkin, was a passenger on board the Tenyo Maru to San Francisco. He has lived in the Orient for a quarter of a century. It was while engaged in sealing out of Japan that he was the central figure in the events Kipling describes.

Something for the Heavens. Rector—But don't you think you girls ought to do something for the heathen? Fanny Fluffy—Goodness, rector, we can't take them out auting, and they wouldn't appreciate fudge, anyway.

THE BIGGEST SMELT

(From the Boston Globe.) What is perhaps the largest smelt ever landed in Massachusetts waters, in recent years at least, was caught at East Orleans yesterday and brought to Boston.

This king of smelts was a perfect specimen, with an overall measurement of exactly 15 inches and a displacement of 8 ounces net. It was a full inch and a quarter longer than a smelt caught in Boston harbor more than a dozen years ago that had held the record hereabouts up to yesterday.

From that part of the cape where the lobster supply is yet often fairly plentiful, where Indian relics are unearthed in fields and garden spots without undue excitement—where in fact nothing except the genuinely unusual excites curiosity of the year-rounders—the mammoth smelt aroused a great deal of interest.

This giant smelt was caught on a pole line by Harold Eldridge, an East Orleans fisherman, in Meeting House Pond, a salt water inlet at the head of Pleasant Bay. King Smelt was evidently on a Sunday pleasure outing with his whole family of veteran smelts at the time, for a goodly number of others, measuring two-thirds the size of this record breaker, were landed before the grandfather of them all was taken from the water. It was with no little skill that the big smelt was seen on a small line, for it fought like a mackerel in plenty of sea room.

Heretofore the record for catching the biggest smelt in Massachusetts was held by a veteran employee of the Globe composing room, who more than a dozen years ago landed a thirteen- and five-eighths inch smelt in Burnham Channel, opposite the L street baths at City Point.

OLD WILLS

Some of the most ancient wills in the world are described by Virgil M. Harris in a book recently published by Little, Brown & Co. According to Mr. Harris, the Musulman claims that Adam himself left a will and that seventy legions of angels brought him paper and pens all the way from Paradise, and that the Archangel Gabriel set his seal to the document.

It is also recorded that Noah left a will. He divided the known world at that time into three parts and left one to each of his sons.

There exists a curious and ancient testament of Job discovered and published by Cardinal Mal in 1839. In it Job's faithful wife, when reduced to the lowest depths of poverty, is represented as having sold her hair to procure bread for her husband.

Jacob, the third of the Hebrew patriarchs, died in Egypt at the age of 147, but was buried by his sons in the cave of Machpelah at Hebron, Palestine the traditional burial place of Prophets and other Biblical characters of their time.

It can be stated that the very earliest reference to an actual testamentary disposition is by the words of this patriarch. And Ierai said unto Joseph: Behold I die, but God shall be with you and bring you again unto the land of your fathers.

Moreover, I have given to thee one portion above thy brethren, which I took out of the hand of the Amorites with my sword and with my bow. And Jacob called unto his sons and said: Gather yourselves together that I may tell you that which shall befall you in the last days.

In the forty-eighth and forty-ninth chapters of Genesis are these words of the dying patriarch, and here is found not only the disposition of a "portion" to Joseph but the character of each son is shown, the virtue or fault of each described, to each a symbolic emblem is assigned and to each a future is prophesied. Here is a will, in fact and in prophecy.

Homer refers to the will of Telemachus in favor of Peneus, to whom are bequeathed all the presents that had been made to Telemachus by Menelaus when they fell into the hands of his enemies, but he adds: "In case I should slay them and survive, you are then to restore them to me in my palace, a task as joyous to you to accomplish as to myself to profit by."

William Matthew Flinders Petrie, the English Egyptologist, unearthed not many years ago at Kahun a will which was 4,500 years old. There seems no reason to question either the authenticity or the antiquity of the document. The will therefore antedates all other known written wills by nearly 2,000 years.
