This was the reporting meeting.

The Report of the Committee on Temperance was called for and read as follows:

BROTHER MODERATOR—Your Committee on Temperance are of the opinion that a more gigantic enemy to human virtue and true happiness never existed, than the traffic in, and common use of, intoxicating liquors. We, however, do greatly rejoice that much success has attended the efforts put forth for the suppression of so inhuman a vice; yet your Committee are of the opinion that while Temperance principles have obtained generally in many localities, there is the very fallacious and dangerous habit of ignoring those principles in the more private walks of life; against which we would take this opportunity of kindly yet forcibly urging our people to consider the danger, and establish a bold front against all unnecessary indulgence, in an evil which strives to carry its blighting, withering curse, wherever it is permitted to exist.

W. M. KNOLLIN, Chairman.
