THE FLIGHT OF THE EMPRESS.

The Empress Eugenie did not wholly despair after the catastrophe of Sedan. She had a lingering hope that as Regent of France she might restore, at least for her son, the fortunes of the Bonapartes.

A POPULAR DELUSION.

N. Y. Freeman's Journal.

There is a widespread delusion that education and intellectual cultivation keep men from evil doing. When a crime is revealed to the public—a crime which has been done by a man of education—we are sure to hear expressions of surprise that such a man could have fallen so low.

Now a little attention to the lessons of experience will show that intellectual education without moral training has no effect in keeping men from crime. Julian the Apostate, that Roman emperor who tried to turn the world back to the false gods of Paganism, was a man of what is called culture.

If education were the best means of helping men to do well, God need not have come in person to redeem the world. Culture of the intellect, and of all that is aesthetic, reached higher in Greece and Rome than it has ever attained since.

In our day, it is plain that education and skill do not make men moral or keep them good. The forgers of the "bezzers," the careful criminals who cover up their tracks, are not uneducated. On the contrary, they will generally be found to be people that have had "advantages."

Protestantism offered the King James' version of the Sacred Scriptures to the human race, on the presumption that all men ought to be able to read. In Protestant theology, the reading of the Bible was the one means of salvation.

In the life around us, surely enough of the consequence of the craze for reading is plain. Scarcely a week passes that do not hear of young minds perverted to thoughts of crime by the influence of reading whatever the reading is.

Eddie Bernary, aged 14 years, and Tresey Seesland, aged 12, are sweethearts. They attend the same school on the West Side. About 1 o'clock Eddie was returning to school after recess. He met Tresey on a main street, near Twelfth. Quickly drawing a revolver, he fired once at her.

On Wednesday, the 7th, after a detour in Belgium to ward off suspicion, the party reached Denville on the Norman coast, leaving to venture on any of the regular lines across the channel. At the little town, the escort looked in vain for a bank to carry the remnants of Cassa to safety.

THE INFLUENCE OF FREEMASONRY.

The Bishop of Nottingham, in the Nottingham Daily Express, publishes the translation of a passage from a recent number of the Lantern.

The Bishop of Nottingham, in the Nottingham Daily Express, publishes the translation of a passage from a recent number of the Lantern. It is as follows: "The Prince of Wales, in his character of future Pope of the Anglican Church, cannot repudiate the Grand Architect, we well understand. The Grand Architect is part of the constitution, like the king or queen. Like them he is a peg (cheville). He plays no other part therein. But a peg presumptive cannot expect to follow peg. The edifice of monarchy is not very solid on the other side of the Channel. An unsettlement has come so quickly."

"The Prince of Wales replies like the Emperor Joseph II.: My business is to be a royalist! And, in this particular situation, he adds: My business is to be a deist!"

"But all the Freemasons of England do not find either the monarchy or the divinity absolutely necessary. They have not all the good reasons of the Prince of Wales for sharing his good opinions."

"When Bradlaugh lately came to Paris, he put himself in communication with the Grand Orient of France. He explained to them the situation. A great meeting of English Freemasons will be held in London to protest against the decision of the Grand Lodge, and to renew the relations of English with French Masonry."

"The Prince of Wales will be dismissed along with the Grand Architect. Would he like us to give him a piece of good advice, very generous in a royalist? Don't let him mix himself up too much in the last named. He is so worn-out."

"The Religious Home. From the home sanctuary, the incense of prayer should ascend as a most sweet morning and evening sacrifice to the Lord. How beautiful and rich in blessing the assemblage of parents and children for morning and evening prayer. In such families we are sure to find proofs of the special benediction of heaven. Faith, religion and virtue are thus fostered to luxuriant growth, and final perseverance almost assured. We earnestly exhort all parents to this salutary custom."

"A Dangerous Case. ROCHESTER, June 1, 1888. 'Ten Years ago I was attacked with the most intense and deadly pains in my back and neck. It was a most distressing case. Extending to the end of my toes and to my brain! Which made me delirious! From agony. It took three men to hold me on my bed at times! The doctors tried in vain to relieve me, but to no purpose. Morphine and other opiates! Had no effect! After two months I was given up to die! When my wife heard a neighbor tell what Hop Bitters had done for her, she at once got and gave me some. The first dose eased my brain and seemed to go hunting through my system for the pain. The second dose eased me so much that I slept two hours, something I had not done for two months. Before I had used five bottles, I was well and at work as hard as any man could, for over three weeks; but I worked too hard for my strength, and taking a hard cold, I was taken with the most acute and painful rheumatism all through my system ever was known. I called the doctors again and after several weeks, they left me a cripple on crutches for life, as they said. A friend and had cured him and would cure me. I pooled at him, but he was so earnest I was induced to use them again. In less than two weeks I threw away my crutches and went to work lightly and kept on using the Bitters for five weeks, until I became as well as any man living, and have been so for six years since. It has also cured my wife, who had been sick for years; and has kept her and my children well and healthy with from two to three bottles all year. There is no need to be sick at all if these Bitters are used. J. J. BERK, Ex-Super-visor. 'That poor invalid wife. 'Sister! 'Mother! 'Or daughter! 'Can be made the picture of health! 'With a few bottles of Hop Bitters! 'Will you let them suffer?'"
