

HASZARD'S GAZETTE.

Wednesday, January 30, 1856.

It has been for some time, that we have had an intention of putting upon record the improvement that has taken place during the last year in the appearance of Charlottetown. This we do for two reasons,—first, that our readers may be enabled at any future time to turn to this page of our periodical, and compare it with the then existing state of the City; and secondly, in the hope, that others may be stimulated to emulate what has been done, and thus render the metropolis worthy of the Island. It was the boast of one of the Emperors of Rome, that he had found the city brick and had left it marble. We shall be content if we have ours brick, trusting to others to turn the brick into marble.

That Charlottetown is destined eventually to change her wooden buildings into others of a more substantial character, and less liable to fire, we do not in the least doubt. There are many causes tending to this change. Wood is becoming every day more expensive, and the facility with which brick of an excellent quality may be manufactured, is every year developing itself. Now, we are in hopes, that the building of such substantial edifices as those of Brennan, Duncan, and Heard, will go a great way to remove the unfounded prejudice that exists in the minds of some against brick and stone buildings. The first has long been an ornament and credit to the city, and its utility as a fire-stopper—we are obliged to coin the word—has been unequivocally demonstrated; the second and third are erections of the preceding year; both are creditable to the owners, and contribute to add to the metropolitan appearance of the place, both, we are glad to say, are three story houses; it is full time to leave off building of a lesser height, at least in the more densely populated part of the city. Duncan's consists of two large shops, with warehouses above. The shops are 52 feet in depth, by 27 in breadth, with a coved ceiling, and extremely well-finished, a large pier glass at the inner extremity serves to add apparent length to the apartment. The windows are of plate glass, each pane 10 ft. by 3, and present a splendid appearance by night as well as day; the corner shop is alone occupied, shutters of Island oak incline the windows of the other. We are pleased by the way to see the native oak taking precedence of the pine, grained as wainscot. Heard's is opposite Queen Square, next above Messrs. D. & G. Davies's store, whose plate glass adds a brilliancy to that part of the town. We think it a pity that Heard did not range with that of Davies, the angle offends the eye, and uniformity of line is becoming in a street. The shop itself presents a remarkably light and airy appearance; and is in every way suited to the business carried on. The ceiling is not coved as those of Duncan's, but a row of dentals some few feet from the wall have a pretty effect, and give the appearance of a large panel. The windows and doors are of plate glass, similar to those of Duncan's, and together with the broad mahogany counterpane—common by the way to both establishments—give an air of respectability, and improve the appearance with the conviction, that where such establishments can be maintained, there must be a corresponding degree of wealth in the community, for whose convenience they have been brought into existence. The removal of these low buildings belonging to Mr. Armetian Sims, and the substitution of a line of shops in their place, has added much to the beauty and uniformity of Queen Street. Several other handsome houses have been erected in various parts of the town. That built by Mr. White in Pownall Street, opposite the Jail, that by Mr. Dawson in Upper Great George Street, the brick house by Mr. Foster, in Kent Street, and a variety of private buildings, all good of their kind and in good style. We wait anxiously to see what the Corporation are about to do with respect to the streets and side-walks, as well as with reference to the sewers; but we do not press, they are matters of moment, and we doubt not will be attended to in due time. We make no apology to our country readers for devoting this article to the City, because we think, that they will feel a just pride in hearing of its increase both in wealth and appearance. It is the best proof that they themselves are doing well, for they may be well assured, that unless the country thrives, the city will dwindle. It is the wealth of the former, that makes the riches of the latter, and when any would-be-wise-man talks of the town having interests in opposition or adverse to those of the country, they may send for the axiom to "write him down an ass."

Poor Queen Elizabeth, clever as she thought herself, would have to confess, if she would take a view of London now, that she was entirely in the wrong when she said, that the head had grown too large for the body. No, no, our country friends may depend upon it, that the larger Charlottetown grows, the better it is for them, the greater the competition, the cheaper they will get the articles they stand in need of, whether by wholesale or retail. The more wealth accumulates, the less will be the rate of interest, and the more ready will they be able to command capital to enable them to extend their improvements.

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.—In pursuance of notice, previously given, Mr. Le Page, last evening, read to a crowded audience, his Poem, on the Balance of Power, as affecting the Nations of Europe.

As this Poem has been published, and can be had for a mere trifle, it is unnecessary to enter into the particulars of its subject matter. But here we may say, that it gives the most and best synopsis of the circumstances of the war that we have seen, and does the Author—a Native Poet—infinite credit, not only in its construction but also in its composition. Some of its passages are truly sublime, and contain the very essence of Poetry. Listen to one out of many of the Stanzas that might be selected. In speaking of the famous charge that decided the Battle of Waterloo, the Poet thus portrays the vivid scene—

"But fifty paces intervene! avant! they forward dare! A hundred bellows cannon roar, their thunders thro' the air.

That storm they feel, and staggering reel for who a front might show, To face the sulph'rous spouts of death, these deadly engines throw?

"Up Guards and at them!" shouts the Duke, when lo! before their eyes,

The ambush'd British Household Guards, like apparitions rise!

Charged and they charge—as Britons charge—and charging onward go,

Loose'ning the avalanche of death in ruin on the foe.

We have no hesitation in recommending this Poem to the Public, and would advise all to obtain a copy, whether or not it be "Stitched up in kivers, yaller, blue, and green."

So soon as the Poem had been read an interesting and animated debate ensued, opened by his Honor the President, who was followed in quick succession by various speakers;—during which, the political constitutions of Great Britain and France, were discussed; the mode in which the Balance of Power may be preserved; the cause that led to Muscovite aggression; the success of the allies, in sustaining the present war, both by land and by sea, and the glorious end that will ensue.

The debate was well sustained, and up to the present time, has been the Debate of the Season.

On Tuesday evening next, that enterprising Mechanic, Mr. Silas Bernard, will lecture "On Wood, its nature and qualities."

Let those who have hitherto excluded themselves from the Institute, because the Lecturers were not Mechanics, and the subjects not Mechanical—now come forward, and give this useful Institute the benefit of their patronage.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—On the morning of Wednesday the 20th inst., Murdoch McDonald, of Ronagh Settlement, Lot 62, was found dead on the Ronagh Road, (leading from Three Rivers to the Wood Islands,) within one mile of his own residence. It appears from the best information that we can obtain, as no Coroner's Inquest was held on the body, that the deceased had been to Mr. Wightman's, Three Rivers, on the previous day with a sleigh load of oats, with the proceeds of which he was returning homewards, when, by an unfortunate deviation from his road, near a high bridge, he made his way to a very deep ravine, in which he appeared from the tracks, to have floundered backwards and forwards for some time in the deep snow, and being, doubtless, bewildered, had perished before morning from the inclemency of the weather. Deceased had in his pocket the remains of a broken black bottle, which had had spirits in it, the cork of the bottle was afterwards found on the road at the distance of half a mile from the site of the sad catastrophe. The poor horse was discovered on Sunday morning standing half way up the hill on the homeward side of the ravine, where he had, without doubt, remained from the time his master was lost. The unfortunate deceased has left a widow and five young children.

THE MAIL COURIERS crossed on Monday backwards and forwards in the short space of six hours, bringing a Colonial mail. We find a short telegram in the papers.

We learn that the Schr. Rival, said to be in the Gulf had arrived at Guysborough and a number of the passengers were waiting at the Cape to cross over.

Died.

On Saturday last, at Tryon, much regretted by his numerous friends and acquaintances, Philip Morris Callbeck, Esq., aged 84 years. Mr. Callbeck was for many years the senior Magistrate for Prince County, and has always sustained a character for probity and kindness of disposition.

On the 20th December, at Ontario, near Constantinople, where he was stationed, James Inglis Cochran, Esq., of the Commissariat Staff, after an illness of fifteen days, of inflammation of the lungs, in the 34th year of his age, third son of the Rev. J. C. Cochran. By this sudden bereavement his relations are plunged into the deepest affliction; and are called to mourn the loss of one who ever proved himself a kind and affectionate son and brother. He had served for about seven years in the Department, in this Province and New Brunswick, to the entire satisfaction of all his superiors, and so as to gain the confidence and esteem of all others with whom he was connected. Orders to the East, he had scarcely been issued at his post, when it pleased God to remove him to a better world. His end was peace.
