The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

Ruth Cameron

In a Boston lodging house, a young woman killed herself the other day, because she discovered that the man to whom she had thought herself engaged for fourteen years, was a married man.

He had been married twenty years, and his home was right in the same city where this girl boarded and worked as a waitress.

And yet, for fourteen years, he had been able to deceive her as to his true position in society.

In some way her suspicions were aroused and she went to his home, found his wife there, saw his child, and then went back to her heart, and put a bullet through her heart.

Coming to make his usual call the next day, the man—if we do not too much degrade the word by calling him that—found her dead body stretched out on the couch. Perhaps he received some of his punishment then and there. Perhaps he was too much hardened by the life of systematic deception which he had led for fourteen years to mind this little incident very much. Who knows?

But I did not bring up this dismal subject to speculate on that phase of the point I want to bring out is this—doesn't the uncovering of such a double life bring home to you, fathers and mothers, the necessity of knowing all you possibly can about the young men who are paying court to your daughters?

Of course it is most unlikely, perhaps impossible, that such conditions should exist in your case as these which brought this poor little waitress to prefer to seek "the undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveller returns," rather than face the dreary wreck her life had become. But what do you really know about the man who comes to see your Louise or your Dorothy, and takes her to the theatre and the dance, etc.? Do you know who his people are, and what his past is, and what is thought of him in his home town? To be sure there is no formal engagement between your Louise or your Dorothy and this man, but it is well to wait until there is, to find out that he wasn't a fit man even to have entered your home?

An agonized father wrote to me the other day from a distant city to tell me that he had discovered that the young man to whom his daughter was insisting on becoming engaged, was the son of a woman who kept a house of ill-repute. He has tried to break off the engagement between the two, but as the daughter is of legal age, if not of the age of reason, has had much difficulty. He wants me to try to make the girl see that a little unhappiness now is better than a life of misery. I wish with all my heart I could help him save her. In this case, the introduction was performed by a trusted friend of the family, who ought to have been more worthy of the trust imposed in him, but there are many cases where the parents have only themselves to blame for such tragic conditions.

Know the man who calls on your daughter. Know his family. Know his past. It may be that you will neglect this duty to her with impunity. It may be that you will sow the seeds of life-long tragedy by such neglect.

Do you care to take the chance? And you, daughters who, for reasons of death or distance, or for any other cause, have no father or mother to do such investigating for you, do it for yourselves. Ask the man who says he loves you to take you to call on his mother. You can judge pretty accurately by her and his home if everything is as it should be. Furthermore take any other course that is open to you to find out about his character and his past life.

And don't say that any such investigation would be distrustful John and you won't insult him that way. That's what the poor little waitress probably would have said.

Cooking is an art to which many are called but few chosen. It usually vanishes from the face of the earth about the time the mother gives up hanging over the kitchen range.

There are some peculiar things about cooking, and one of the most peculiar is the after effects. Mother never had to be surrounded by a cook book in four volumes or a table of weights and measures. She never had to take the temperature of a veal roast or the contents of a domestic science course. Her only recipe was a sense of smell and an unerring faculty for "seasoning to taste."

Nothing will embitter a young wife with take any other course that is open to you to find out about his character and his past life.

Child Nearly Buried Alive.

Found Evidence of Life at the Grave During Burial Service. Duluth, Minn., Feb. 19.—After being prepared for burial and apparently dead two days, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Maholech, who live near here, was discovered to be alive as the burial service was being held. Three days ago the child fell in a bucket of water and was nearly drowned. It was noticed at the grave that moisture had gathered on the glass of the coffin. The body was removed, and by the use of stimulants the child was resuscitated.

Many new coat models are slightly cut away and are buttoned diagonally down across the front.

Regarding the long coat, the length varies. There are coats that are cut away from the waist line in front and extend to the bend of the knee in the back; others that extend half way to the knee, and are cut straight around the bottom; and still others, quite long, that are open up the front, showing the skirt to the waist line, above which they are slightly double-breasted.

White sailor hats of white and black crepe with white velvet bands are being worn.

Sailors of white straw with hymn book at side and one small plume are being stylish.

Fortune Telling

Does not take into consideration the one essential to woman's happiness—womanly health. The woman who neglects her health is neglecting the very foundation of all good fortune. For without health love loses its lustre and gold is but dross. Womanly health when lost or impaired may generally be regained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This Prescription has, for over 40 years, been curing delicate, weak, pain-wracked women, by the hundreds of thousands and this too in the privacy of their homes without their having to submit to indelicate questions and offensive repugnant examinations.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence held as sacredly confidential. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Great Family Doctor Book, The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, newly revised, up-to-date edition—1000 pages, answers in Plain English hosts of delicate questions which every woman, single or married, ought to know about. Sent free, in plain wrapper to any address on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to cover mailing only, or in cloth binding for 50 stamps.

Fads and Fashions.

White satin, trimmed with wide black satin cord and braid, is being exploited for day gowns.

White satin separate skirts to be worn with sheer white waists are utterly plain.

One-piece frocks for spring of white corduroy, serge, blue serge and striped summer ratine, having a short fitted petticoat of twilled silk, which is cut off just above the knees.

The Norfolk jacket has appeared again, and will probably emphasize the popularity of the pleated jacket with its loose belt. Last year this jacket was worn in dark green, blue and in scarlet with white serge and white linen skirts. This year it is a part of the suits. It also appears in summer ratine.

Ratine comes in plain and striped colors, black-and-white, gray-and-black and blue-and-white are among the best choices now.

Gold silk trimming on suits and gowns is good.

Flat shoes of Scotch ribbon are being worn at the neck instead of black satin and taffeta ones.

New spring coats of serge and thin corduroy are being lined with plaid instead of plain silk; the plippings of are used on velvet bands that trim the sailor collars and the wide turn-over cuffs.

White sailor hats of white and black crepe with white velvet bands are being worn.
