ply to an anonymous letter which appeared in your paper of August 4th in which I was accused of "leaving passengers behind at Portugal Cove." I am writing this in justice to myself and wish to state the fatcs of the case as they really were. Previous to so doing I wish to say that I consider it to be a most cowardly way to attack a man in the public press by using either an assumed name or a nom-de (or parties) who wrote the letter have tions? If not, why not be manly and sign their name (or names), then I would at least have the satisfaction of knowing to whom I am replying.
As it is I am in the dark, as it were. However, the true facts of the inci-dent are as follows: On the day in question I waited at the wharf in Portugal Cove until I received the passengers and mail on board. On receiving the said passengers and mail (and there being no prospective passengers in sight) I backed the steamer into the stream, which has always been (and still remains) the custom. After having backed away from the wharf and being turned around, thus heading for Bell Island, and at the time being fully one-quar ter of a mile on my way to Bell Island, I was notified that "cars were coming over the hill." This was the first and only notification I received regarding any "prospective passen-gers" having been left behind. Had I been notified previous to leaving the Cove that evening that returning soldiers and others were on their way leaved have most willingly accommodated them; but as it was, I was not notified, and as I said before, when got the passengers and mail on board I went about my business. I trust that this explanation will I I trust that this explanation of the satisfactory to everybody concerned satisfactory to every particular. LONDON, To-day, Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, said in the Commons to-day that so far as he was aware the Gernan Government had been careful not to remind the world that they had expressly promised in 1914 to Britain not under any pretence whatever to annex Belgian territory, but from the tenor of the communications emanating from the sources inspired, this was a promise, which if they could they proposed to repudiate. Replying to a suggestion that the new German Government should be asked whether they adhered to this pledge, Lord Cecil said that the British Government had no means of communicating with the German Government.
