Twenty-Eight Men Meet a Terrible Doom-Details of the Disaster.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 29.—A special to the News from Iron Mountain, Mich., says: It is reported here this morning that the Mansfield mine, a few miles from Crystal Falls, caved in last night and killed 40 being soft, and the probability of rescaing any of the unfortunates alive is very poor. The scene around the cave in is heart-rending. A rescuing party is doing every-thing possible to reach the men with very little hope of doing so in time.

CORRECTED ACCOUNT OF THE DISASTER. CRYSTAL FALLS, Mich., Sopt. 29.—With a terrific rush the water of the Michigan river broke through a bed weakened by mining into the Mansfield mine between 9 and 10 o'clock last night, drowning 28 men who were at work directly under the cavein.

There were 46 men in the mine when There were 46 men in the mine when the accident occurred, but eighteen of them who were working in the lower levels, managed to escape. None of the bodies have been recovered and it is believed it will be necessary to divert the channel of the river before they can be secured. It is believed to have been the worst disaster that ever occurred in the Lake Superior region.

when the night shift went on duty it was noticed that more water was coming into the mine than usual, but no alarm was felt by the men at the pumps as they managed to keep the drifts free. The miners pursued their work as usual. Suddenly a few minutes after 9 o'clock there was a loud report and rush of water, and the men felt themselves overwhelmed by an the men felt themselves overwhelmed by an avalanche of mud and water. So fast came the flood that it is doubtful whether the men on the upper levels had time to drep their tools and run for their lives to the old shaft. Had any of them reached the perpendicular opening, however, it would have availed them nothing for the shaft known as "old No. 1" collapsed as soon as the water reached and undermined its base.

This occurred at 9:30, and it was then known to those in charge of the mine that the men in the upper levels had been trapped and drowned like rats by an accident which had long been expected. The men at work in the lower levels were warned men at work in the lower levels were warned in time to escape.

The news of the disaster sped on switt wings throughout the little hamlet, and a wild cry of alarm was voiced by the inhabitants as they rushed from their homes and gathered about the shaft just as the last one of the eighteen men was brought to the surface. There was a call for volunteers, which was at once answered, to descend the only available shaft and succor, if possible, any miners who might possibly be found alive. But it was of no avail, for the waters had reached the lower level shaft, and the angry roar which greeted the would-be-recuers as they peered over into the dark channel at once precluded all hope of rescue, and the 28 men were of rescue, and the 28 men were

Most of the men lost are Cornishmen. It is safe to say that nine-tenths of the victims are men with large families, which lends additional horror to the disaster.

Hooper arrived here early this morning, hired a rig and drove to the office of Undertaker George, saying he wished to have the body of Mrs. Hooper exhumed and embalmed.

The work had only been half accomplished when Mr. George, sen., interfered to prevent any meddling with the body without the coroner's authority. Coroner Corbett was not-fied and placed a man in charge of the grave. The husband of the deceased woman then requested Dr. Corbett to hold an inquest and deposited funds to defray expenses. The coroner consented to this after securing consent of the county crown attorney.

A runaway occurred on Dundas street yesterday, from the effects of which Mr. William Thompson, of Derwent, formerly city editor of the Adventises, may die. yesterday, from the effects of which alt, William Thompson, of Derwent, formerly city editor of the Advertiser, may die. Mr. Thompson, accompanied by his brother James, was driving into the city with a spirited team of colts. Near Maitland street they took fright and bolted oft, upsetting the light rig at almost the first bound. Mr. James Thompson was thrown clear, and immediately gathered himself together unburt. The wagon was traveling on the side now, and the nearly maddened animals were swaying from the sidewalk to the car track in their wild flight. Mr. Thompson looked around for his brother, but could not see him; then he realized that he must be tangled up in the rapidly-moving mass up the street that was now commencing to break up from repeated knocks and jolts. The center of the convent fencehad been reached before Mr. William Thompson was disentangled from the debris and thrown violently against the curb. When picked up he was almost unrecognizable. He was unconscious and to all appearances had been so from the time the wagon overturned, as he uttered no cry when being dragged along. From the appearance of his face and head that part of his body must have borne the brunt of the knocks and bruises caused by repeated contacts with the pavement. Blood was welling from his ears and nostrils and his face was frightfully swollen and livid. Kind hands carried him into O. J. Bridle's store across the way, and in a short time three doctors were on the scene. The ambulance was at once telephoned for, and Doctors Niven, Jarvis and Stevenson set to work on the injured man. Some ugly scalp wounds were found, but from a superficial examination no fracture of the skull could be discerned. That internal injury had occurred to the head was shown by the stream of blood from the facial organs. The left side of the face suffered most, and a nasty bruise at the temple locked ominous. The ambulance had been telephoned for again, and the doctors had finished their casual examination long before it hove in sight. After 30 minutes had elapsed it arrived, and Mr. Thompson was then taken to the hospital.

Great Ball Game Expected on Tecumseh Park.

Which May Decide the Championship of -The Alerts Return-Luck Was Against Them

The Alerts arrived home Thursday night

The Alerts arrived home Thursday night weary after their long journey and their two straight defeats. The latter is something they are not used to, but they intend to redeem themselves this afternoon on Tecumseh Park.

"It was terribly bad luck that beat us at Cobourg," said a member of the team. "Not only that but we were not in condition. We left here at 3:30 a.m., Wednesday, and arrived at Cobourg at 2:45 in the afternoon. We were driven to the hotel, had to snatch dinner and then started for the ball grounds. We felt more like going to bed than playing ball, but we hotel, had to snatch dinner and then started for the ball grounds. We felt more like going to bed than playing ball, but we did the best we could under the circumstances. The errors made were very costly, two of them letting in runs. It was a day off for our first baseman, but the rest of the team played a game it would be hard to beat. Hutchinson, Hynd and Ball, the outfield, were in good trim, Hynd catching a low liner over second which no one thought it possible for him to get. He has a very sore hand over it. Johnson and the old-timer, Jack Player, were in good trim, the latter having no less than four hits to his credit and no errors. Bob Quinn caught an errorless game, and it was no fault of Hiscott that they were defeated. His pitching was good and fielding splendid. But we had the hardest kind of luck. "Our defeat in Toronto? Of course that was an exhibition game and it does not matter so much. We were tired and had an off day. That must have been the case when Player made five errors. Bert Sheere was in the box and up to the fifth inning held the Dukes down to three hits. Then the Alerts went to pieces in the sixth and Bert followed suit. Hiscott was put in the box in the seventh and shut the Dukes out."

Vocations of English Working Women. Some interesting facts may be gleaned by the English census returns concerning the struggle of the sexes for professional supremacy. The present showing demonstrates that it is in the lower ranks of professional life that women are numerous. Excluded from the clergy, they are found considerably in excess of the men in the subordinate fields of religious work. In the medical profession there are 100 practitioners, 345 dentists, and two veterinary surgeons. In the legal profession women figure only as clerks, while as teachers their number is more than double that of men; 660 women journalists, with 127 reporters, figure in the lists, with 69 merchants, 3 bankers, 765 brokers and agents, 165 commercial traveiers, and more than 17,000 clerks. More than 1,000,000 women are registered in domestic and not far from 2,000,000 more in industrial pursuits, but in the higher skilled industries they cut rather a poor showing; nor is their deftness shown to advantage in the making of warches and philosophical instruments, for-Vocations of English Working Women. ness shown to advantage in the making of watches and philosophical instruments, furniture decoration or jewelry, though some 4.000 miners and 45,000 agricultural
