CHILD WIVES OF INDIA.

LOVE SOMETIMES LASTS LONG IN HINDOO HOMES-

Ceremonies for Four Days-An Interesting Article on the Marriage Cus-179 DUNDAS STREET toms of the Country - Single Life

Prohibited.

To give a fair idea of Hindoo women and marriage customs I must go far back to the ancient times and see how and why customs changed, writes a native of India in the Forum. There was a time when the Hindoo lady was educated and when there were no child-marriages. Some of the "Upanishads," speculations on philosophy, were written by ladies. There are books written by ladies also on mathematics and other abstruse subjects. Of course, they did not write sensational novels, but they were taught music and dancing-dancing, not jumping, hopping and skipping round a hall in the arms of strangers. There were no child-marriages at that time, and the young lady had liberty to select a hushand herself.

It seems that the system did not prove a good one in the warm climate, where women develop very early, and it was changed, and the giving of the daughter by the father is the prevailing method at Honors—Messrs. Froats, Peel, Sager, Stickle, and Miss Allen. The Brahman has to get his daughter married before she attains puberty. This custom has crept into religion. The Hindoo religion strictly forbids single life for woman or man; especially must the woman be married.

Owing to this rule, if a Brahman's daughter attains puberty before marriage the father is disgraced, he loses his caste and no one will marry the girl. Thus, when a poor man has more than one daughter it is a misfortune for him. The Hindoo father himself has to find out a suitable husband for his daughter, so he Austin, Bath, Bell, Birkenthal, Bowes, Bradshaw, Bray, Campbell, Carr, Carves, Collins, Colquhoun, Coote, Davis, Dickins, goes to a gentleman who has a son. He first makes inquiries about the family, the property, the health and education of the Dobie, Ferriman, A. E. Graham, E. E. Graboy. Then he asks the father of the boy to harn, Griffith, Harding, Hart, Hartwell, marry his son to his daughter. The father Hawthorne, Jamison, E. G. Johnston Julien, Kemp, Knight, Kraft, Little, MacCallum, McBain, McCaugher, McCord, McIntyre, of the son asks for dowry, and the amount of this is fixed according to the means of the man who asks for it, and not of the Malcolm, Marsh, Might, Miller, Mills, Morman who gives it; that is to say, if the gan, Morris, Murray, I. B. Palen, V. Palen, father of the boy is very rich, he asks thousands of dollars.

Meanwhile rice (colored red) is distributed in small quantities to all the guests assembled to be ready to throw it on the pair in token of their bless-

Then the yellow cloth is removed, and the bride and bridegroom stand face to face. Then the father of the bride stands near and repeats the Sanskrit sentences, which mean: "The bridegroom is not deformed, has not lost caste or has not been polluted, and is healthy. To him I give my daughter in the presence of God, fire and the priests." The bride's father says:

"My daughter is healthy; she has a brother. She is not of the same family as the bridegroom. This, my daughter, I give to you. Protect her as her father Then the bridegroom promises: "In religion, in money, conjugal rights and in salvation I will never leave her." This promise is made three times and he knows that he now has a wife, and that he must love and take care of her. And he does this sacredly when, later, he lives with her. After this the sacred fire is kindled, and the bridegroom's and the bride's scarfs are tied together with a knot. The bridegroom takes the hand of the bride and walks seven times around the fire. This is called "the seven steps." All the while the priests chant the Vedic mantras. There are many minor ceremonies after this, and they continue for four days. On the fourth day the bridegroom takes the bride to his house with the same pomp as when he came for her. The young pair ride together, the wife sitting on his left side.

The bride stays there one night with her mother-in-law, and returns to her parents.

After some months she is sent back to her husband's house for a few months. While living there she occupies her mother-in-law's or sister-in-law's room. She does not even speak to her husband. The utmost modesty is to be observed by a Hindoo woman. She must not talk loudly or giggle and laugh in the streets. The young pair thus religiously married, love each other from childhood, and that love be-market man told us that eggs had already risen in price so that we could only get 11 for 25 cents. They will probably be no cheaper than that in New York before next spring, when warm weather comes. The fashionable white Leghorn eggs are even higher. They bring fairly dizzy prices all the year around. During the Christmas holidays the price will go up still more, until at times eggs will be 3 and 4 cents apiece-that, too, net the fancy fresh laid, but just the output of the plain, common hen. At times it will be impossible at some of our groceries to get them at all. The demand for eggs for table use rapidly increases. There seems a disposition among civilized people to use less meat and more eggs and milk. If I were a woman out of employment, I should select some spot near a good market and go very cautiously into the egg business. Any woman can learn it who has patience and pluck enough to earn her living at anything else. For egg production I should select the rose comb Brown Leghorn fowls. At that calling they beat all other hens. For broilers and egg laying both I should get the handsome Plymouth Rocks. Then the Light Brahmas are excellent winter layers and make heavy birds for roasting. With these three breeds the poultry woman would be equipped. If only one kind could be kept, then it should be the rose comb Brown Leghorn for egg production, since eggs are the article that is scarcest all the cool and cold weather. A warm henhouse is wanted for the winter. The poultry books and hen papers will give so much information that even an amateur can succeed who has common business ability. Of course there will be many discouragements, and three women out of four will give up before success comes. But to the fourth woman who holds on, success is sure and an independent, healthful occupation, with a happy home. The wise thing for the hen woman to do is to find private customers, such as hotel and restaurant keepers, for her wares. A very little capital is required, and two ladies might go in together on the

Here is one of the indignities and insults that women must put up with because they cannot vote: A woman teacher may give all the best years of her life to the public school at the small salary that affords a plain living. She may be more capable than she ever was in her work, but as soon as she reaches the age of 50, perhaps before, the masculine board of education sneeringly observes that it wants "fresh blood and youth in the women teachers." She must step down and out into the world to begin all over again or be dependent on some grudging relative for her living. Perhaps some of the very men who turn her into the street went to school to her and owe to her teaching all the little intelligence they ever had or will have—it matters not. It matters not either that 50, "the youth of age," is the time when the human being who has lived right is just coming into the flower of his life intellectually and is more capable than he ever was before. Nothing of this counts. Out the crushed, insulted woman must go. The thoroughly mean and fiendishly low down part of the thing is that a man school principal or teacher of the same age is never discharged. I know at this moment a board of education that systematically weeds out the lady teachers approach-ing middle age, when at the same time year after year it keeps in office a cranky old male principal who is now 75 years old. Women teachers, you have no vote. You have no voice in the selection of these men who thus barbarously dispose of you. This and this only is the reason why you are turned out. Long public documents and reports must be indexed, and much depends on the knowledge and skill of the indexer. It is gratifying to read that the leading indexer in all Great Britain is a young lady, Miss Nancy Bailey. She is now employed in making out the index to the parliamentary debates published officially in Hansard's Guide. The importance of the place the young lady holds may be judged from the fact that W. T. Stead wrote to her as follows: "I would prefer to index Hansard rather than have a seat in the house of com-should now set herself. A demand for trained library assistants has arisen, and the day is nearly over of the gum chewing, impudent girl who refuses to wait on you when you know the books you want are in and who only cares to earn a few dollars a week till she gets money enough together to buy her wedding garments. At Drexel institute, Philadelphia, a library class has been established, which will henceforth train young women to be real librarians, polite and intelligent.
