

THE ORGANIZATION

The Fisheries Council of British Columbia, an organization of the major fish and seafood processors operating in British Columbia and Yukon Territory, Canada, draws upon a ninety year history of predecessor fisheries organizations, including the British Columbia Seafood Exporters Association (B.C. SEA). Council members produce the majority of the fish and seafood delicacies available from Canada's Pacific coast fishery, supplying a full spectrum of Pacific fish and seafood products to over forty countries. Member companies are committed to the international marketplace to which as much as two-thirds of their production is destined. Of paramount importance to this commitment is the members dedication to meeting the highest quality demands of their discriminating international customers. This quality program has been developed through members' strict quality assurance procedures, and has been improved over the years to meet the increasingly quality-conscious world markets and is confirmed by compliance with the stringent inspection services provided by the Government of Canada.

COUNCIL ACTIVITIES

The Council provides industry leadership and represents the industry on a wide range of issues. Activities of the Council include:

- developing and implementing generic export marketing programs
- representing the Council's views to government bodies at the Federal, Provincial and Municipal levels in Canada
- gathering and analyzing data related to harvesting, processing and marketing
- addressing technological research and development, and product development issues
- upholding the interests of the fishing industry in general, and of the members in particular in relation to government, the public, and other organizations, both international and Canadian.

COUNCIL COMMITTEES

The Fisheries Council of British Columbia has a number of committees which meet on a regular basis to address issues such as:

- international marketing
- Canadian marketing
- harvesting
- technological development
- quality assurance.

These committees work in concert with various Canadian government departments and ministries on issues of concern. In addition, they serve as a source of information to other government bodies, news media and the general public on the British Columbia fishing industry.
