

ever before. The country needs their services now even more than in prosperous times, when wastefulness is less harmful. In addition to the foregoing, a serious blow is struck at the morale of the whole remaining staff who see the efforts of years brought to nothing. The spirit of an organization is not something that can be built up at a moment's notice and it is this factor that will bear most heavily on the most efficient and valued members of departments.

If we have faith in the future of our country, may we not well question whether we are justified in paying so heavy a price to tide us over a merely temporary emergency.
