Evidence of the Crown. from duty and reasons therefor.

Dr. Johnson was positive that there were no signs of mental weakness exhibited by Mr. McDougall. There was no loss of memory, for he told twice over the story of his defalcations and his knowledge of recent events was clear.

The latest in Write Porce in the story of the defalcations and his knowledge of recent events was clear. Attributed to Age.

To Mr. Blake, Dr. Johnson attributed his physical breakdown to his can and the circumstances under which he was placed. A rigid cross-examination followed concerning the medical symptoms and indications of insanity. Mr. Blake advanced a hypothetical case of indications of tongue tremor, locomoter ataxia, murmur of the heart, sylerosis, reflexes and all of the rest of it, as pointing to insanity. Would the rest of it, as pointing to insanity. Would the rest of it, as pointing to insanity. hat it would show scallity, and scallity ame with old age.
