Dr. Goldwin Smith, in Notable Letter on "Man and His Destiny," Reviews the Religious Thought of His Generation.

"The churches seem to be trying to reinstate religion by imposing demonstrations. The attempt is hopeless. Nothing will revive religion but the reassurance of its truth."

This is the postscript to Goldwin Smith's letter in yesterday's New York Sun on "Man and His Destiny."

The letter professes to be the conclusions of the writer on matters usually regarded as religious, and sums up the views expounded in many pre-access to your columns, ranging myself, as I still do, with the 9000 who in an English journal had craved for religious light," the letter begins. "The movement which caused that craving has gone on. The churches show their sense of it. Even in that of Rome there is a growth of "Modernism," as it is called by the pope, who, having lost his mediaeval preservatives of unity, strives to quell it by denunciation. tion. Anglicanism resorts to a grand pageant of uniformity, beneath which, however, lurk Anglo-Catholicism, Evangelicism and Liberalism, by no means uniform in faith. The Protestant churches proper, their spirit being more emotional, feel the doctrinal movement less. But they are not unmoved, as they show by relaxation of tests and inclination to informal if not formal union, as well as by increasing the aesthetic and social attractions of their cult. Wild theosophic sects are born and die. But marked sects are born and die. But marked is the increase of scepticism, avowed or unavowed. It advances probably everywhere in the track of physical science. We are confronted with the great question what the world would be without religion, without trust in Providence, without hope or fear of a hereafter. Social order is threatened.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, ignoring the details of party organization, went to the Catholic Cathedral with Sensitor Coffey in the morning and spent the rest of the day undisturbed.

A leading London Liberal suggested that Sir Wilfrid be tendered nomination, and the suggestion was received with enthusiasm. The prime minister nipped this bright idea in the bud. Firmly and positively he intimated that honor could not be entertained.

Charles Hyman will not be a candidate. He has made this clear, tho his popularity is still unquestioned.

Someone remembered that back in 1894, in the days of the P.P..A the Catholics of Ontario had a strong friend in Rev. D. C. Hossack, who said that organization did not represent the attitude of the Protestants at large towards their Roman Catholic brethren.

The Catholics of London have remembered Hossack kindly, and this vote is so important that the former pastor's name is acceptable to the Liberal organization of the city.

There is no doubt that the Conservative leaders will be cordially, even enthusiastically, received, all over the province. The people of Ontario are a thinking people, and Mr. Borden is eminently qualified to put their thinking caps on for them.
