Why Are Book Plays So Popular?

Have you read Meredith Nicholson's fascinating story, "The House of a Thousand Candles?" If so, can you tell why it makes such a great stage success? Vaughan Glaser will present the play at the Grand next week, and The World would like to obtain the opinions of Toronto people who have read the book as to why it makes such an interesting drama.

These letters must not exceed one hundred lines and be addressed to The Contest Editor of The World.

For what is considered the best opinion, written by a lady, a box of five seats will be awarded for Monday evening, Feb, 15, at the Grand.

For the best written by a gentleman, a box of five seats for the same performance To the next two will be given two of the best orchestra seats for Monday betters will be received up to Saturday evening, Feb. 18.

THE GLOBE DEFENDS THE MELON. Toronto Globe, Feb. 10: The improvident and prodigal bargain made by the Canadian Government with the Canadian Pacific Railway restrained the government from regulating rates until the railway was clearing ten per cent. on its capital. In subsequent issues of stock, much below par, there was no attempt to protect the public, and the right of regulation was pushed further and further away. In the present issue of $50,000,000 the public have been safeguarded so far as it was able to do so with the handicap of the old agreement. The right of regulation will not walt upon the securing of ten per cent. on the total capital, but on th capital exclusive of this issue. In fact the prospects of regulation by the government are improved, for the new capital will increase the total profits and bring the company nearer per cent. on the former capital. The new $50,000,000 has been issued at par to the shareholders in proportion to their holdings, altho the stock is selling at over $170 for each $100 share.

In the case of an ordinary company operating on a business basis this would be a matter of no concern. A mining company, for example, may issue millions of capital to its shareholders pro rata at par, at ten cents on the dollar, or for nothing, and the public are not affected. If a mine is capitalized at a million the holder of a one-dollar share owns a one-millionth part of the mine. If the capital were increased to one hundred millions, and handed out to him, he would be in exactly the same position. If the capital were cut in half, which he migh regard as a "lemon," his half share under the half-million capitalization would leave him in the same position be a one per cent. dividend under the was in a position to impose prices one- holders at some 73 cents on the dollar original capital, a one-tenth per cent. half more than could have been de- less than C. people would be more likely to be complacent while a company was paying five per cent, on a million of capion half a million, even if the relation-ship o the public to the company were the same in both cases. The public would in both cases be providing a would in both cases be providing a net profit of $50,000. new Canadian Pacific issue. The comwants $50,000,000 for extensions and other purposes. This could be secured in many ways, but the company has decided to issue $50,000,000 of stock to the shareholders at par. This wil increase the common stock from roughly, in the neighborhood of $150,000,000 to about $200,000,000. The company might have obtained the same amount by issuing at $150, and in that case only $33,333,333 additional stock would be necessary. Instead of increasing the capie 1 to $200,000,000, it would be creased, roughly, to $183,000,000 exactly the same under either method. million dollars a year on the carrying ed. But net profits yielding six per cent. on the larger issue would pay, roughly, seven per cent. on the small-er, so the dividend would be the same. A large issue of stock does not increase A young captain, who was drilling net profits. These must be taken from the patrons of the road. The point to be borne in mind is that a large issue of stock must not be used to conceal under no obligation to see that dividends are paid on such is ues. In the case of the Canadian Pacific the public can do nothing until the limit of ten per cent. is reached. Their position in that regard has not been injured, but has been improved by this issue.

Playgrounds in Spoka Aubrey Lee White, president of the city park commission and civic beauty onent, has plans to establish 27 playgrounds, one in the immediate vicinity of every public school in Spo-kane. In connection with these there will be shower baths and other modern features. The commission plans to expend $1,000,000 on playgrounds, parks and a civic centre, with assembly hal's and branch libraries. The cfty will have more than 2980 acres of land before the end of the year and it is planned to develop this to rank with the foremost in the country. Most of the land was donated to the commission. The civic centre will be at the intersection of Riverside-avenue and Munroe-street overlooking the Spokane Falls, in the heart of the business district. commission is also making plans for ther improvements in various parts of Spokane. The city charter is now being revised to give the commission jurisdiction over all residential streets.
