

THE EVENING TIMES, ST. JOHN, N. B., MONDAY, MARCH 19, 1906.

My Friend the Lawyer.

At Grasses we found some men of the quays who could talk Italian, and in five minutes I knew for certain that I had suspected. A white yacht, answering the description I gave of "Aretusa" had sent a boat before noon to meet a gentleman. The Signore was in long brownish coat and close hat. One was stout, with much color; the other, a young girl, was slenderly beautiful.

"That impudent fellow has whiskered central man," suggested Ralph. "That's them off to Cattaro, to see his beakly an' central man. He's probably checking now with average glue to think that willy-nilly Countess Kildare-Delam can't get out of her bargain."

"I don't believe they would willingly have let the little girl go there. It's to be nothing of leaving us in the lurch without a word," said I. "Ralph, there's something pretty devilish under this, or I'll eat my hat."

"Well, I should expect to see you deavouring it, if I hadn't heard Beeky's confessions, she hadn't told me some things," Ralph amended his sentence. "I'm hanged if I won't give chase!"

"How can you? You were saying as much as so the young 'beak' who had got it out, there wasn't more than the ghost of a lead after Ostendino on to Cattaro and it's to Cattaro one must go for the ancestral ruin."

"If there's a ghost of a lead, it will do for me and this motor," I said. "What does it matter if we both smothered, it only we get there first?"

"Men and motors don't get far where they're smothered. You'll have to wait till tomorrow morning, when we can all go flying down by the Austrian Lloyd, if the transports don't turn up in the meantime."

"Wait till tomorrow morning? My name isn't Terence Barrymore! I do that, or if I wait one minute longer than it will take to go back where I came, and load up with petrol, enough to see me through the job for good or evil."

"You'll start off at once, without finding my more—and road?"

"There's no more to be said out of this, Cattaro, unless I'm far out of my reckoning; and if there's no road after Cattaro, I'll get through somehow, never fear."

"I don't fear much, when you set your jaw that way, my son. I must travel light for speed. I don't want an unnecessary ounce of weight on board that car today, for she's got to show her piece and she never did before. You must stop behind, and instead of saying goodbye, try to cheer Miss Beeky."

"Well, needs must, when somebody tells you, mumbled Sir Ralph. But he did not look very dismal.

"I made no preparations, save to fill up with petrol, and put all the spare bidons sent by the Austrian Lloyd in the tonneau. I was in luck, as the day was not to be a morning day, and I wouldn't have delayed even long enough to find my big coat, if I hadn't suddenly thought of it. I was inclined to be a little vain of my driving. But I doubt his powers as an engineer, and have been somewhat anxious for the past half hour."

"It is after seven o'clock," I said. "Yes, I was dining when I heard your motor. I would run you to the rescue, but I have it in mind to take you to the rescue; and perhaps it would be kind as well as wise. Do you know how to reach Schoss Hrovo?"

St. Patrick's Day Celebrated by Social Gathering at White's

Branch 124 C. M. B. A. celebrated St. Patrick's day by a dinner enjoyed in White's fine dining hall, King street, Saturday night. Some fifty or sixty members of the order were present, and the function was very successful.

Richard O'Brien, president of the branch, presided, with Very Rev. W. E. Chapman, V. G., as his right hand, and Hon. R. J. Ritchie and Aid. John McGoldrick at his left. Mr. White had the tables prettily decorated with green in honor of the occasion, and the speeches were served to the accompaniment of excellent phonographic music, including several Irish numbers.

The menu cards were very pretty and appropriate, and besides telling of the good things prepared, had a well arranged list of Irish apt quotations accompanying each toast.

The toasts were drunk in order, and when the first was reached the chairman proposed the King. Mr. O'Brien was in excellent form and spoke eloquently. He referred to King Edward as showing his sympathy in the Irish cause and doing all that he could for the improvement of the relations between Great Britain and Ireland.

The national anthem was heartily sung. In his closing remarks, Mr. O'Brien said it was not for the bishops and clergy of the church the national history of the past, but for the people as a whole. Speaking of the church in the maritime provinces, the chairman referred to the death of Archbishop O'Brien, grand chaplain of the C. M. B. A.

Very Rev. W. E. Chapman, in response to a toast which he presented in the last few days to some in close contact with many of the hierarchy in Canada, and it was easy to see how well selections had been made in the choosing of the men for the high place. The church was blessed to have in the person of the late Archbishop O'Brien a man who was not only a man of God, but a man of the world.

Mr. O'Brien proposed the C. M. B. A. and in his remarks he referred to the fact that the C. M. B. A. was a man of the world, and a man of the church. He said that the C. M. B. A. was a man of the world, and a man of the church.

MUCH SPECULATION ABOUT NOVA SCOTIA'S NEXT GOVERNMENT

Halifax, March 18—(Special)—There is much interest in the question who is to be the next governor of Nova Scotia. Mr. Mitchell, M. A., is one man, at least, who would not take the position were it offered him. Your correspondent asked Mr. Mitchell tonight and he replied that he had had a letter from a personal friend in Ottawa asking him if he would accept the position and his reply was that it was with great regret he would have to decline it, were it offered, his physician declines to allow him to do anything that would cause any mental strain, and the office would make necessary. This letter to Mr. Mitchell was from a semi-official source.

It is said that Chief Justice Westbury is anxious for the office, and that F. A. Laurence, M. P., is another of those who would not take it. C. C. Blackader, of the Atlantic Recorder, would say nothing one way or the other. William Roche, M. P., is expected to be in the race.
