Extreme Heat Didn't Hurt This Sale

Selling 3,600 waists in two of the hottest days of the summer, when the maximum temperature was ninety-seven degrees, is the merchandising record of the Denesque Company in Grand Rapids, Ia. Unusually attractive prices and clever advertising turned the trick and shot the volume of this store up to new heights during an otherwise dull season. And the waist sale went big despite the fact that throughout the season waists and blouses have been poor sellers because of the popularity of dresses and sweaters which are worn as substitutes for waists.

Miscount the waist business was slow the firm was able to obtain 3,600 of these at very attractive prices from manufacturers desiring to close out spring merchandise. With this opportunity the management decided it could do nothing more productive of good will than to stage a gigantic blouse sale and quote prices so low that women could not resist them. It was felt that there was an opportunity to pass the savings on to the public in such a way that much good will would be built up.

The blouses were offered at thirty-nine and fifty cents each. Many were elaborately decorated with embroidery, pearl buttons, punch work and lace collars and there were many waives with organic collars. The sale was well advertised and to give the public an idea of the immensity of the merchandise event some interesting statistics were quoted. Here is part of the advertisement:

"In these 3,600 waists are more than four miles of fabric. The material, a yard wide, would extend twenty-six times as high as the Washington Monument."

"Seven thousand two hundred square yards of fabric are used with 21,000 pearl buttons. The material would make a sack large enough to contain the Cedar Rapids Postoffice Building with a surplus for a big bow."

"If the thread were unraveled it would form one strand long enough to reach between New York and San Francisco three times, with sufficient left over to loop between Des Moines, Ia., and Cedar Rapids five times."
