Journalist's There was some talk of a general election in the house last week. D. D. McKenzie d off with the statement that he would not pose the Grand Trunk bill if, before con-ding the deal, the government would proise to go to the people and ask a mandate. moment later, J. H. Burnham, member for eterboro, formerly a Unionist, now a cross ncher, suddenly supplemented the idea. As a patriotic Canadian and a man who never expects to get back to this house," he observed, "I say we should go to the country and let the people decide the question." A chilly blast blew over the chamber and strong men shuddered at the very idea. McKenzie, Burnham and Company will do well to perish the thought if they think that, in this House, there is any substantial concurrence in their election views. And perhaps it is not drawing too much on the imagination to say that this antipathy to dissolution is shared, not only by government supporters, but, as well, by some of the opposition. A few days ago, rumors were current that, if the senate did not pass the bill as it stands, dissolution on the question might be expected. It was only a flash in the pan, and not taken very seriously. A fortnight ago it might have been, but things have travelled fast since then, some established tenets of political faith have been shattered, ruthlessly, and the status quo is ominously altered.

What happened in Ontario was sad. What happened in the Federal by-elections on Oct. 27th also some people to grave and discomfortsolicitude. It carries the same dominant of warning that the old order passeth nd the country is disposed to clean house hatever particular party happens, here and re, to be domiciled therein. An election, would be a bad thing for the country and its outcome might produce conditions of governmental instability.

It is not necessary, however, to argue the tter or borrow trouble because there won't be any election now and, probably, there won't be any till the sweet bye and bye when the present parliament shall have reached the end of its constitutional tether. Then, if no excuse can be thought up for extending the term beyond the early part of 1923, we may have an election; hardly before.

The Farmers' Meantime, much history will be made, many things will happen in politics, the Union vernment will demonstrate its cohesive strength, (if any) under stress; some weak links may be cut out of the political chain and, particularly the farmers will be able to show what they can do. If, here in Ontario, they make good, the effect will be great upon future political conditions. If they fall down hard, the country will conclude that all this rtentous upheaval is more or less of a brain orm and that business at the old stand is good enough. From the Unionist point of view, it would be a pity to start anything in the line of a general election till the farmer's ucking hen has shown what she can hatch.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

Whatever other saving there may be under a U. F. O. inistration there will be no daylight saving.

Farmer Drury, after the first bad night's sleep he has had in years, concludes that there is more peace in growing peas than in provincial politics.

HOTEL MEN' CONFERENCE

New York, Nov. 7,—Fifteen thousand hotel men, being the largest gathering of its kind ever held, are to meet in conference here next week. They are coming from all parts of the United States and Canada, from South America and from several of the countries of Europe to discuss the pressing question of the hotel business—the changes made necessary in methods of management by high cost of living, labor shortage, and the other familiar elements of the post-war situation.

The Fourth National Hotel Men's Exposition will be held in Grand Central Palace. Three floors will be found necessary this year to accommodate the large number of exhibitors.

The hotel men will pay particular attention this year to the problem of the permanent guest. Shortage of houses has forced an ever-increasing number of people to change their habits of living. For the houseless family the hotel was naturally a first resort. Hotel men believe that guests who have once known the irresponsible com-fort of hotel life will be unwilling to go back to the worries of servant hire and the winter coal, even after the housing shortage shall have been remedied.

(Toronto Globe)

The Government candidate in Carleton-Victoria, New Brunswick, and the Liberal candidate in Assimibola have lost their deposits. The irony of the case is that the law which fines a candidate for not obtaining enough votes was supposed to be a device for protecting the old-line parties from irregulars like farmers and labor men. Now the irregulars like farmers and labor men. Now the irregulars like farmers and labor men. Now the irregulars beat the old-line candidates so badly that the tables are turned, and the regulars are fined.

(Statesman)

So long as the opposition to President Wilson was due to the determination of the Senate to criticize the Peace Treaty, the Toronto Globe denounced the Senators as pro-Germans. But, when the Senate set aside the President's veto on the War-time Prohibition Enforcement Bill, the Old Lady of Melinda Street was wreathed in suiles. How can the Senate be "pro-German," and at the same time the friend of prohibition?
