Book 'em

In my work with the Criminal Division of Community Legal Aid Services at York U., I've talked to several students who have been caught. The York bookstore has an excellent security service, including plainclothes security people.

During the first weeks of school, some students will be tempted to take advantage of the confusion in the campus bookstore to shoplift. To anyone considering shoplifting, don't do it, especially from campus stores.

You will be caught. And that's only the beginning of your problems. The police will be called and you will not be able to talk your way out of it. You will be taken to court and face a fine and a criminal conviction. Neither

The embarrassment of being caught, the worry and anxiety of a court appearance and the severe consequences on your future of a criminal record just aren't worth it.

Sincerely yours,
John Galinaitis

Zann Fan

I thought your piece on Lenore Zann was most interesting. It probably would have had even more interest for your readers had you pointed out the fact that Lenore was a student in the Theatre Department just two years ago. You also say she's a western Canadian. She was, in fact, born in Nova Scotia.

Don Rubin
Chairman

Department of Theatre

(Lenore claims she was kicked out of York's Theatre Dept.—Ed.)
