Poetry.

PARODY ON BURNS' "RED RED ROSE"

Oh! my love has got a red, red nose
That's blown each day at noon,
And its nose is like a melodie
Played on a cracked bassoon!
As fair art thou—as red thy nose,
So deep in love am I;
And I will love thee still, my dear,
Till a' the seas gang dry.
Till a' the seas, my dear, gang dry,
You never can suppose
My love for you is "all your eye,"
Since clearly 'tis your nose!
And fare thee well, my love awhile,
And farewell to thy nose,
Yet tho' it were a thousand mile,
I'd hear it when it blows!

Miscellaneous.

THE RESTING PLACE, BY J. N. MAFFITT.
No man lieth down, and riseth not till the Heavens be no more; they shall not wake; no be raised out of their sleep."

However dark and disconsolate the path of life may seem to anyone, there is an hour of deep and quiet repose at hand, when the body may sink into dreamless slumber. Let not the imagination be started, if this resting place, instead of the bed of down, shall be the bed of gravel, or the rocky pavement of the tomb. No matter where the remains of wearied man may lie, the repose is deep and undisturbed—the sorrowful bosom heaves no more; the tears are dried up in the fountains; the aching head is at rest, and the stormy waves of earthly tribulation roar unheeded over the very bosom of the pale nation of the dead—not one of the sleepers hee'r the spirit stirring trumpet or respond to the rousing shouts of victory.

How quiet these countless millions slumber in the arms of their mother earth! The voice of thunder shall not awaken them; the loud cry of the elements—the winds—the waves, nor even the giant tread of the earthquakes, shall be able to cause an iniquity in the chambers of death. They shall rest and pass away! the last great battle shall be fought; and then a silver voice at first just heard, shall rise to the tempest tone, and penetrated the voiceless grave. For the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall hear his voice.

Wm. Morgan.—"I met at Smyrna with a renegade who had renounced his Christian creed, and lives as a Turk. He is a native of the United States of America, by the name of Morgan, and is charged with having revealed what has resisted the importunities even of the wife, and the cunning of the inquisitive all over the world, namely the secrets of free masonry. His life at home was threatened; his credulous countrymen believed that he had disappeared in the Falls of the Niagara, but he found safety in flight, and is degraded by the Asiatics as a regenerated babe." Shores of the Mediterranean, by F. H. Standish, Esq.

Punishment for whipping Wives.—At a late term of the court of Common Pleas for Meigs county, Ohio, a man named Vail was found guilty of an indictment charging him with the crime of whipping his wife, and sentenced to a fine of $50, and confinement in the county jail on bread and water for ten days. "For a less offence," as the Gallio polis paper gallantly observes, John German was sentenced at the same term of court to six years at hard labor in the Ohio penitentiary.

Charles Dickens, "Boz," has entered a protest against the practice adopted in many English Theatres of dramatizing his works before they are finished, thus misrepresenting his characters, and in the necessity of making a denouement to every version, anticipating his own intended conclusion. His complaint is most just.

The Countess of Pavao, who has just completed her twelfth year, is about to be married to the Marquis de Fagal, son of the Duke de Palmella, the friend and adviser of Donna Maria. The young Countess' fortune is about ten millions of dollars. Worth having!
