That generous actions are so rare. It isn't that people have not hearts That beat in sympathy with men; It's just because the thought departs, And does not come to them again.

It isn't that peop e have not joy, Whene'er they help in doing good, It's just because no thoughts employ Their heedless minds just when they should

They are not selfish; want of thought Has given them this ugly name, And made them seem what they are not, Incurring oft severest blame.

One man is kind, and doeth much, Another mildly looketh on: The goodness of his heart in such, He worketh when they all are gone.

But had no man example set. Perhaps he never wou d have thought And needy ones were needy yet, Deploring still their wretched lot

Then should we work, and never shrink, The hardest duties God may send: Reminding those who never think, And helping others till the end.
