

THE MAKING OF ALE.

THE BOTTLING.

Great care must be used in bottling ale in order to put it on the market in good condition. Ample storage facilities are needed to secure the proper conditions for each bottling, and to have it in the condition when it reaches the consumer.

and
ing.

REE!

Examination and advice is given by Dr. J. C. McLaughlin, M.D., at his residence, 115 King Street, Chatham, Ont., on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, from 10 to 12 o'clock.

18 DIPLOMAS

and Licenses received from the State of New York, and the State of New Jersey, and the State of Pennsylvania, and the State of Ohio, and the State of Illinois, and the State of Michigan, and the State of Indiana, and the State of Wisconsin, and the State of Minnesota, and the State of Nebraska, and the State of Kansas, and the State of Oklahoma, and the State of Colorado, and the State of Arizona, and the State of

New Mexico, and the State of Idaho, and the State of

Montana, and the State of

Wyoming, and the State of

Utah, and the State of

Nevada, and the State of California, and the State of Alaska, and the State of

Hawaii, and the State of

Guam, and the State of

Puerto Rico, and the State of

Virgin Islands, and the State of

Samoa, and the State of

Tonga, and the State of

Norfolk Island, and the State of

Christmas Island, and the State of

Cook Islands, and the State of

Niue, and the State of

Tokelau Islands, and the State of

Palau, and the State of

Marshall Islands, and the State of Micronesia, and the State of Polynesia, and the State of Melanesia, and the State of Indonesia, and the State of Philippines, and the State of Malaysia, and the State of Singapore, and the State of Brunei, and the State of

Sarawak, and the State of

Sabah, and the State of Penang, and the State of

Malacca, and the State of

Sumatra, and the State of

Java, and the State of Borneo, and the State of

Sulawesi, and the State of Moluccas, and the State of Maluku, and the State of

Irian Jaya, and the State of Papua New Guinea, and the State of

Vanuatu, and the State of

Fiji, and the State of

Tonga, and the State of

Norfolk Island, and the State of

Christmas Island, and the State of

Cook Islands, and the State of

Niue, and the State of

Tokelau Islands, and the State of

Palau, and the State of

Marshall Islands, and the State of

A SONG IN THE NIGHT.

Still in a world of sorrow and of sighing.

Still in a world of heartache, pain and loss.

Where every hour records the farewells of the dying.

And each new day brings to the soul its cross;

Still in a world where tears are even falling.

And leave their furrows on the pallid face.

Where sorrow's depths to deeper depths are calling.

And life's strange meaning is so hard to trace;

O God, whose love is infinitely tender.

To Thee, from the dark shadow of our grief.

We look, our guard, our refuge, our defender.

Thou hast for souls smitten sure relief.

We would not bring Thee words of sad repining.

Though burn the furnace with a seven-fold heat;

If 'tis Thy will, and for the gold's refining.

We ask for grace each test to meet.

Like as a father, for his children feeling.

A pity that no language ever can express.

So dost Thou pity, and with Thee is healing.

For the crushed heart in all its bitterness.

Such is our solace, O Thou loving Father.

In each sad hour of anguish and of night.

Nor will we murmur, but we will the rather

Look unto Thee for comfort and for light.

While yet we tread the pathway of our sadness.

Lead us, our Father, tenderly along.

Till all our griefs shall turn to lasting gladness.

And earthly sighs give place to heaven's sweet song.

~~~~~

QUID PRO QUO.

Dolly Fairman did not get hysterical and faint; she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

But she was not one of the fainting kind.

three men were lying about a cheerful camp fire. One of them, Dick Fotheringham, was reading to the other two scraps of "news" out of a three-months old copy of the London Morning Post.

which a half-breed had just brought from Fort William along with the letters. The letters, of course, had been read first, and now they were enjoying the gossip of a wholesome English newspaper.

"Well," said Fotheringham at last, "I've read you all the news, I think, shall I commence on the advertisements?"

"By all means, Dick," said the originator of this prospecting party. Lord Steven Dalkeith. "Let us have every word. It's not every day we have an English paper to glaze over."

"But," grunted Hamby, the third of the friends, almost slinging his great blonde mustache as he attempted to relight his pipe at the fire, "you've left out the most important column. How about the births, marriages and deaths?"

"That's true," said Fotheringham. "How on earth did I overlook them. Here you are, then."

With comic gravity he read out each item of the nuptial section, and with solemn "here endeth the first lesson" passed on to the marriages.

"Boulton-Messum," he read, "On the 17th instant, at St. Margaret's, by Rev. Glover Richardson, M. A., Harry Boulton to Mary Elizabeth, only daughter of the late Charles Messum, of Heatherlea."

"What's the matter?"

Lord Dalkeith had sprung to his feet, pale and trembling.

"I must go back to England at once," he said. "You know why. I came over here on this Bohemian expedition. I told you I was in love with a girl who was already engaged. I was afraid to trust myself near her, and I fitted out this little prospecting party of ours to kill time, and if possible my love. Her affianced husband was Harry Boulton, and the announcement you have just read shows me all too plainly that he has jilted my poor little Dolly for the sake of Miss Messum's money bags. I shall go back at once, and either win Dolly yet, or thrash Boulton within an inch of his life—the ungrateful scoundrel!"

Lord Dalkeith's words were pulled up, and the three friends started back for Fort William en route for Port Arthur, en route for New York, en route for England. Which goes to show that the post, and even progressive steam, encourage rather than kill romance.

It was the prospecting party, the Dolly Fairman of the sudden death, six months after her marriage, of Harry Boulton's wife. But she remained in Paris many months after the event, and those months were important ones in her life.

After his wife's death, one thought dominated the mind of Harry Boulton. He must find Dolly and win her back again. He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.

He would tell her, which was the truth, that he had never ceased to love her, and that he had suffered much by the temptation before which his ambition had failed.