As we announced yesterday Sergt. Joseph Horwood, of the Western Fire Station, a veteran fireman and one of the oldest, if not the oldest, active fire fighter in the city, having reached the age limit was retired on a pension, from the active list on Saturday. It we mistake not. Sergt. Horwood was a member of the Cathedral Volunteer Fire Brigade at first and in 1872 joined the Phoenix Fire Brigade under the late Chief Frank Boggan. Though a cooper by trade Sergt. Horwood for the past 30 or more years has been permanently employed as a fireman proved himself to be a zealous, brave and capable man, and both under the late Mr. McCowan and the present Insector General Sullivan had great trust and confidence reposed in him The present Superintendent, Michael Dunn, is a contemporary of Sgt. Slippery Roads.

The icy condition of the steepe streets of the city yesterday made them highly dangerous for people to go over them, Yesterday afternoon the Council's employees, Geo. Bambrick and D. Joyce, scattered slag over these thoroughfares so that people could get over them safely. However, boys coasting and skating brushed the material away during the evening, leaving the places almost as bad as ever. The boys who did this had ample room to enjoy themselves without disturbing the material.
