Teachers' Training Opportunities.

[For The Telegram.]

Many leading universities now offer summer courses to teachers, leading up to degrees, and I would like to encourage this movement in the interest of Newfoundland. One teacher, Mr. Henry A. Butler, of Upper Gullies, Conception Bay, son of Mr. R. Butler, a farmer of Kelligrews, took a course during the holidays this summer in Nature Study, Botany, Biology, and methods of teaching these, at the Agricultural and Provincial Normal College, Truro, N.S. He attended the institution and did the theoretical and practical work required for first year during the summer session, and succeeded in passing the examination, gaining 60 p.c. in Nature Study and Biology, and 65 p.c. in Botany. As the writer was chiefly instrumental in having Mr. Butler sent to this Science School, he has much pleasure in forwarding to you herewith, the students diploma won that he believes is worthy of commendation.

Mr. W. D. Reid also very kindly gave this teacher and several others attending summer courses a pass to Canada enroute to this college, at my request, and this has been a stimulus or encouragement, worthy of special notice and meriting very best thanks.

More teachers should embrace such opportunities of training and attend during their holidays the Agricultural Colleges of Truro, Guelph, McDonald, or Wye, for B. S. A. degrees; as also Liverpool University Schools of Commerce and Pedagogy for degrees in Practical Science, Commerce and Methods of Teaching, respectively; and London University School of Political Economy, Clare Market, London, England, for proper training in Economics and politics generally. This would also give them opportunities of attending Teachers' Conventions, held in each of these places during the holidays, with their valuable exhibitions, model classes of instruction and information, imparted as desired by the best specialists obtainable, and there visiting historical places, and best schools and universities in those places, learning by travelling as well. In fact it would pay the Government to send teachers to these modern University Summer Schools, the same as Canada, English and American Governments are doing, to train teachers practically during their holidays along the special lines required, for I am convinced that more such practical training is needed in this country.

At the present the schools of the country are too much absorbed in book work and in verbal studies that seek to train the memory, but which fail to give adequate discipline or to fit our people for skilled labour or practical life. The teaching of the elements of industry is needed—Agriculture in Agricultural Districts, Fishery in Fishing Districts, and Domestic and Mechanical Sciences in every district in the country. This can be encouraged best by sending our teachers away during their holidays to be trained in these branches and to become specialists in their districts. This is the age of specialists, and co-operation among the teachers can lead to progress among the people in this direction. The N. T. A. should take up this great subject of the training of teachers and endeavour to secure Training Scholarships for their members, if not every seventh year off for them, for the purpose—a privilege that most of the progressive teachers of America have extended to them—and this would enable them to take advantage of those excellent opportunities of summer training as soon as possible.

Yours truly,
P. G. BUTLER.

A Blow From a Lion's Paw.

A man entered a London theatre in the early morning and found to his horror that four lions, which were housed there, had broken from their cage. One gave him a blow with its paw, then took him in its mouth. The blow from a lion's paw is said to be, after the stroke of a whale's tail, and the kick of a giraffe, the strongest thing in nature, so that the victim was dead when the keeper went to the rescue. Only one lion had concerned itself with the man and was now sitting over him as a dog sits over a bone. Two of the lions were playing on the stage with a "property" garland, and the fourth was seated in the royal box, placidly surveying the gambols on the stage and the terrible banquet in the auditorium. The murderer relinquished its prey immediately its master appeared, and all four bolted for their den like children detected in some misconduct.—St. James' Gazette.

Mrs. Tucker on The Daily Mail.

SHE RECALLS THE OLD TIME STYLE OF ASKING FOR YOUR LETTER.

"This country is getting so fast," says Mrs. Tucker, "that I'm not sorry that my time is getting short."
"Before now," says she, "it was interesting to watch out for Bruce train, there was always a doubt as to what time it would strike the town, and we could squint over the papers and see who was coming for days ahead, but now that it arrives any old day, why, the charm is gone out of it."

"They tell me," said she, "the Post Office heads are all sick and tired of practical life. The teaching of the elements of industry is needed—Agriculture in Agricultural Districts, Fishery in Fishing Districts, and Domestic and Mechanical Sciences in every district in the country. This can be encouraged best by sending our teachers away during their holidays to be trained in these branches and to become specialists in their districts. This is the age of specialists, and co-operation among the teachers can lead to progress among the people in this direction. The N. T. A. should take up this great subject of the training of teachers and endeavour to secure Training Scholarships for their members, if not every seventh year off for them, for the purpose—a privilege that most of the progressive teachers of America have extended to them—and this would enable them to take advantage of those excellent opportunities of summer training as soon as possible."

Mrs. Tucker says, "She don't believe that the man who found out this country ever intended that we should have a daily-mail, any more than we should have garden-parties. Sure, she says, 'the poor horses that rushed up in standing jumps, twice a week to the 'Depot,' will now become spavined in less than no time.' Tucker says, 'He don't know much, but he could always tell what time the Bruce's train would leave along. He was never out in his calculations more than eight or nine hours, and in this way he occupied a certain standing in the community, but now under the new arrangement all his Yours truly,

Stafford's Liniment.

A family medicine cabinet that does not contain Stafford's Liniment is about as complete as a watch without a main spring—and worthy of no more confidence.

Stafford's Liniment is true "first aid" to the injured. There is nothing better for sprains, bruises, cuts, wounds, etc.

There is no liniment we can recommend with more certainty of giving satisfaction. It will relieve pain, reduce swellings, and we know of no better liniment for the treatment of Neuralgia or Rheumatic pains and swelling or stiffness of the joints and muscles.

chances to appear knowledgeable have disappeared."

Under the good old style, business people could spy agents for breakfast foods miles away, and it afforded them a splendid opportunity of being confined to their room when the train passed the Gas House, but now they're in and have their valises emptied before our business men have time to tell how many trout they caught the evening before.

Under the old way of doing things, the merchant who expected a letter with spindulics in it stood a splendid chance of being disappointed only once a week, but under the new style he's vexed every day in the week. The "new woman" who invaded the Post Office every Thursday with a key attached to a reel, and wearing a far-away look, has lost her attractiveness, and the boys are becoming so used to her that they're beginning to call her by her christian name.

Mrs. Tucker says, "that with all our advancement she still believes that the happiest times in this country were the days when you had to go down to the Post Office and ask the 'man at the window' if he had a letter for you. Of course, she says, you trembled a little on the legs, fearing you'd have your head snapped off, but outside of that, you cherished a letter a great deal more and generally read it over, nine or ten times. In those days you were disappointed so often, that when you did actually receive a letter, you told all the neighbors about it, and the 'smart young man' who lived alongside was sent for to read it. This individual—the smart young man—was treated with great respect, and occupied about the same standing in those days, that a chairman of an outport road board does today."

In these days, Mrs. Tucker says, a letter was never torn up, for, to destroy a letter received from a relative in the States, was considered as great a crime as cutting one of Lash's Christmas cakes before the twelve days of Christmas had expired.

Gambling.

BY H. L. RANN.

Gambling is the process of betting whether the fourth ace is still in the deck or up some-body's sleeve. It is an exciting pastime and will keep a man awake easier than an ulcerated tooth.

Gambling comes in different sized packages, depending upon the roll of the gambler. Some people get more pleasure out of tossing pennies at a crack, in an attitude of pigeon-toes expectancy, than others do by bolstering up wheat margins on a falling market.

One of the most popular forms of gambling is known as poker. This is a game in which one mid-faced gull wily-sawed by two stout harpies in fancy vests by a series of spirals and costly raises, the last raise being usually sufficient to leave him in a breathless condition. The most harmless kind of poker is penny ante, which can be played for ten days hand-running without sending anybody home broke.

A few years ago our society people discarded poker in favor of bridge whist. This is a very expensive form of entertainment, and when run at high voltage makes the game of draw poker look like playing marbles for keeps. After a man has run up against four or five stiff hands of bridge whist, with reverse english on them, he will be lucky to cash in at 10 cents on the dollar.

One of the most genteel forms of gambling is the progressive euchre party, at which the most progressive sinner draws a handpainted water pitcher and undying enmity of all concerned. These parties are sat upon by the clergy in loud, explosive sermons ever so often, causing some of the most prominent members of the Ladies' Aid society to retire from the church in high dudgeon and a shrill falsetto. Husbands of the guests are not allowed to do anything except furnish the prizes.

Although gambling is prohibited by law, Wall street has never been arrested. After all, there ought to be one place in this country where the unsatisfied sucker will not be interrupted in a wholesome effort to get stung.

A cable to the Tribune says the Midlothian election is regarded as more significant than even the Northwest Manchester election, and sounds the doom of the Government and the death-knell of Home Rule. The Liberals are endeavouring to show that a straight fight between Hope and Shaw would have resulted in a Liberal majority of 2,381. The Unionists and Laborites alike oppose this argument, the Labor Party having resolved to stand on its own legs and to have no alliance with the Liberals. The Unionists everywhere are jubilant, and in Belfast the news was acclaimed with the profoundest joy, amidst wild scenes.

On Second Thought.

BY JAY E. HOUSE.

Every town has two or three men handsome enough to wear the well known fedora hat.

There always is glory enough for the man who does his work, or performs his duty, honestly and sincerely. It doesn't matter what the crowd says. If he knows his motives are good and his work efficient that is recompense enough. And it is the only form of recompense really worth while.

However, the billboard is both restful and instructive compared to much of that which it conceals.

When a man is born a two spot he should not be criticised for his inability to take the trick.

There are a number of inviolable rules. This is one of them: You can't dignify an issue nor establish a principle by clowning it.

Before marriage the average girl's idea of it is that keeping house means looking after a couple of goldfish and taking care of a fern.

Give a woman love and she is willing to skimp a little on food and clothing.

The average man's knowledge of the tariff on wool is confined to the fact that underwear woven from it scratches.

Harve Parsons complains because it is mostly those with ivory knobs who write limericks. Mr. Parsons is unreasonable. The limerick is about the only chance the ivory knob has.

The best of most of us can hope for is that the jury will disagree.

If you have anything really worth while to say the phraseology in which you clothe it is unimportant.
