Earth's Crest Weak

IN NUMBER OF SPOTS, SAYS ORE.
GON SAVANT.

Eugene, Ore., Mar. 8.—There are several especially weak places in the crust of the earth, said Dr. Warren D. Smith, professor of the University of Oregon here, in a discussion of earthquakes.

"One of these," he explained, "is the Straits of Messina, between Sicily and Italy, where in 1908, a very destructive earthquake took place. Another is the junction of the Pacific arc with the Indo-Malayan arc. This is in the region of Java and the Philippines. Some exceedingly devastating earthquakes have taken place in those regions. Another place is the Chilean coast, and still another is along the San Andreas Rift in California.

"Perhaps the most unstable part of the earth's crust today is in the northwest part of the Pacific, bordering the great Tuscara Deep. A broad belt of folded rocks includes the entire archipelago of Japan, the Philippines and New Guinea in the western Pacific, and this belt runs right around the Pacific ocean. This is the first major feature of the Pacific.

"East of this region is the great trough known as the Tuscara Deep. To the south of this, just east of the Philippines, is a still greater deep, which is a continuation of the one east of Japan. With a depth of slightly over six miles, this is the deepest place known in any ocean. To the east of this trough is a submerged mountain range, in fact several, but one in particular which apparently is rising and some day will form a new festoon of islands paralleling Japan and the Philippines.

"According to the latest investigations in the Pacific, great thrusts, due to accommodations in the outer shell of the earth, are taking place in the direction of the Asiatic continent."

Science and Justice

France has awarded a pension of 12,000 francs to a man who was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1878 for poisoning his wife. The pension is due to a scientist who never heard of the alleged criminal. At the time of his trial chemists found one milligram of arsenic in the woman's body. That was enough to secure conviction. Nearly 40 years later scientists reported that a maximum of two milligrams of arsenic may be found normally in the human body. The man, who had always protested his innocence, appealed and won. Science, in more ways than one, is slowly removing the bandage from the eyes of Justice.

London Letter

(By PANTON HOUSE for the Canadian Press)

LONDON, Feb. 22.—The Women's section of the British Empire Exhibition, which is mainly concerned with the provision of hospitality for visitors from overseas coming over for the great show, met this week under the presidency of the Duchess of York. It was then announced that with the help of the Royal Colonial Institute, the Overseas League, and the Victorian League, good progress is being made. Several of the City Companies, of whom we wrote last week, have agreed to set aside certain days for hospitality to Overseas visitors, who will have an opportunity of seeing the companies' ancient and often beautiful "halls" and the treasures kept there—portraits, silver plate, and relics of many kinds. Among hostesses who will give receptions are the Duchess of Norfolk, the Duchess of Atholl, the Duchess of Devonshire, and Lady Weigall, and hospitality is being offered by many London women's clubs. It is hoped that the Government will give a reception at Lancaster House (the home of the London Museum) and that the Colonial Office may arrange for the erection of a special stand for unofficial Overseas visitors to see the ceremony of the Trooping of the Color. This takes place on the wide gravel space at the Whitehall end of St. James' Park on the King's Birthday, June 3.

Although St. Paul's Cathedral is quite a modern building as London reckons—Sir Christopher Wren began it in 1675, and the last stone was placed in position in 1710—it is said to be "showing signs of fatigue." Within the last ten years it has been found necessary to strengthen two of the huge piers which support the dome, by cutting away and renewing defective masonry; and the remaining six may have to be treated in the same way. Excavations for underground railways, and vibration due to our ever-growing motor traffic are blamed for the trouble. The southwest tower is said to be leaning six inches out of the perpendicular. Eventually all the piers and bastions may have to be underpinned.

Six baby crocodiles have just arrived from West Africa at the London Zoological Gardens. In order that the young exiles may not pine for home, a special nursery for them has been made ready, with a rocky playground and a tank. Under the tank is a radiator, which will keep the water at a West African temperature of 85 degrees. Miss Joan Proctor, who is Curator of Reptiles at the Zoo, is causing her new charges to be fed on chopped meat and small fish. Although 18 months old, they still measure their length in inches, but by the time your great-great-grandchildren visit the Zoo they may have attained anything up to 20 feet. The largest crocodile now in the Gardens is about 14 feet long, but he is only 90 years of age, and that is juvenile for a "croc."

The Gardens have just received a specimen of Pere David's Deer, a nearly extinct animal, of which very little is known. No one can say whence it originally came, but its ancestors were preserved, in a half-tame state, in the park of one of the Imperial palaces at Peking. Pere David, a French missionary, sent home in 1868 the first skull and skin ever seen in Europe. Later on a few living specimens followed, and aroused much interest among naturalists, who had not so much as heard of this curious deer with a tail like a monkey's. In 1900 there was a flood in Peking; part of the park walls fell, the royal deer escaped, and the local peasants revelled in venison. Almost the only survivors are at Woburn, Bedfordshire, where the Duke of Bedford, President of the Zoological Society, has a small herd.

On Feb. 26-29 the Shire Horse Society held its annual spring show in London at the Royal Agricultural Hall. The Society, which exists to improve the breed of Shire or old English cart-horses, compiles and publishes a Shire Horse stud-book, and gives prizes, gold and silver medals and premiums, not only at its own London shows, but at country shows both large and small. The shire is the leading British breed of heavy horse, adapted equally well to farm and transport work. This year, for the first time at any British show, his weight-pulling powers will be demonstrated, on various types of road surfaces.

Kingston, an ancient riverside town about 2 miles from London, of which it may be considered a residential suburb, is to hold a pageant on June 9 to celebrate the 1000th anniversary of the crowning of King Athelstan in the year 924. The Saxon kings of England, from Edward the Elder (901) to Ethelred (978) were all crowned here; according to tradition, on a great stone, which the visitor may see in the market-place.

Those of you who have regretted your inability to visit King Tutankhamen's tomb in Egypt, where Lord Carnarvon and Mr. Howard Carter discovered it, will see it exquisitely reproduced at the British Empire Exhibition. All the strange furniture, the chariots and objects of art, of which we have heard so much, will be displayed in three underground chambers, just as they were found at Luxor. W. Amos, a well-known architectural sculptor, is carrying out the work, assisted by his two sons.

and about a dozen expert workers in wood and stone. It will be remembered that the King's throne, couches and chariots were gilded. The gold leaf used in making the reproductions has cost nearly $5,000. Already eight months' work has been expended on the undertaking, and it is by no means completed. The intention is that as fresh discoveries are made at Luxor, models shall be added to the collection at Wembley.

Reckless Joy Walkers

Albany, N.Y.—A bill introduced in the State Assembly seeks to regulate the movements of the "reckless joy walker." The measure provides that "pedestrians shall not use the streets or highways negligently or recklessly, or wilfully refuse to obey the signal of a traffic officer, or recklessly disregard their own safety or the safety of any other person by the manner of their use of the streets or highways."
