The woman made a victous attack on man who was endeavoring to keep her in sight until the patrol arrived, and when the policeman came she turned her attention to them. Lying on the lawn she kicked and bit and scratched to prevent being put into the wagon. Finally an officer got on each side of her and held her arms, and she was lifted bodily into the patrol. Still the policemen could not hold down her voice, and it was with no little amazement that they heard her break into: "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly." Nearly all the way down to the station she sang this chorus, and became furlous at the lack of appreciation. Finally in a fit of rage she blew her false teeth into P. C. Kelly's eye. Fortunately no harm was done, but it ended the singing, as from then on the woman could only mumble. At the jall she was lifted out and placed in the cells, and will conce up in a few days. Washington, June 30.—Polygamy no longer is practiced by Mormons, and the men who is caught taking a plural wife is promptly excommunicated. So Joseph F. Smith, venerable president of the Mormon Church, is quoted in an interview in the Post today. President Smith said that he still supports, but does not live with, the wives he married prior to the deciston of the supreme court of the United States that polygamy was unlawful, and before the church issued its famous manifesto, forbidding plural marriages. Since his elevation to the presidency his efforts, he said, have been directed toward inducing his followers to practice monogamy.

Asked if he thought it best for a man to have but one wife, the husband of five wives and the father of 32 children, repiled:

"In these days of the high cost of living, there is no doubt that the average man is much better off with one wife. If a man cannot support one wife decently, it would obviously be impossible for him to support more wife decently, it would obviously he impossible for him to support more wife decently, it would obviously he impossible for him to support more wife decently, it would obviously he impossible for him to support more wife decently, it would obviously he impossible for him to support more in they he dressed and fed and housed has well as possible, and the man with an average lincome would be in terrible strains if he had several wives on his hands, all crying for the latest thing in hats and gowns."

President Smith, who came to washington to appear before the "Sugar Committee" of the House, said he expected to leave the city today.
