DESOLATION AND DESPAIR.
The Dreadful Horrors of the Turkish Cholera Camps.
The scenes of death and desolation and despair which are part and parcel of the kingdom of the god of battles seldom have been brought so vividly to the minds of peaceful people as in the terribly realistic pictures of the Turkish cholera camps and in the dispatches of hardened war correspondents, whose souls sickened at the horrors they witnessed. There were several cholera camps, but the most dreadful examples of irremediable suffering and wholesale deaths, under conditions that made death a welcome friend, were seen in the main camp at Hademkeni, a short distance behind the headquarters of Nazim Pasha, the Turkish commander-in-chief, on the Tchatalja lines.
"The horrid scenes in the villages in the rear of the army pale altogether into insignificance when compared with the horrors of Hademkeni," wrote a correspondent of The London Daily Telegraph, "where the remnants of the army defeated at Lule Burgas were finally rallied. Three days ago I rode over the hills from the place where I was encamped, intending to visit Hademkeni. I mounted the last slope which hid the valley in which it lies, and then I was brought to a standstill by the awful babel of sounds which arose from beneath me. I was gazing into the valley of the shadow of death. There is a station at Hademkeni, and a train was in the station. It was black with the most wretched specimens of sick humanity seeking to escape from the dread spectre. The large square in the centre of Hademkeni resembled a successful fly-paper in midsummer. It was covered with the corpses of the dead and the writhing bodies of the living in all attitudes—some prone, some sitting, some kneeling, some constantly shifting, some with hands clasped as if in supplication. In some parts of the area the dead were piled in heaps; in others those still living were almost as closely packed. This shocking lake of misery was being constantly fed by rivulets of stretcher-bearers, bringing in fresh victims from the camps and forts, and by others who crawled in of their own accord, seeming to prefer to end their days in the company of their fellow men or else expecting to find succor."
Antiquity of Porto Rico.
Ethnologists have reason for thinking that Porto Rico and the adjoining islands may have been peopled from the valley of the Orinoco instead of from Yucatan. When first occupied by man Porto Rico may have been a part of a peninsula connected with South America. Its fauna and flora are of the South American type, and it contains relics of a forgotten race which show evidence of a high grade of culture. Few traces of these aborigines are now to be found except in the interior of the island. Among the curious remains are stone inclosed plazas.

Regularity
of the bowels is an absolute necessity for good health. Unless the waste matter from the food which collects there is got rid of at least once a day, it decays and poisons the whole body, causing biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches. Salts and other harsh mineral purgatives irritate the delicate lining of the bowels. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills—entirely vegetable—regulate the bowels effectively without washing, sickening or griping. Use Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills on which ceremonial dances were performed. The remains of carved idols and pottery show no small degree of skill and taste. No traces of stone buildings resembling those of the Mayas are found, but the houses are of the South American type. The manner of disposing of the dead also resembled that practiced in the valley of the Orinoco.

Motion Pictures as Detectives.
Through a Paris contemporary we learn of a novel method adopted by the Prague police authorities to detect the perpetrators of high crimes and misdemeanors. But whether the project will prove a success remains to be seen. When a person of distinction in the annals of crime is being sought and the police experience difficulty in laying hands upon the suspect, in future they will send to every cinematograph exhibition in Bohemia a photograph of the person "wanted." During the entertainment the picture will be shown with some little explanatory note, and at the conclusion each member of the audience will be free to act as an amateur detective. It seems very likely that at this method will be fruitful in actions for damages.—London Globe.

Care of the Eyes.
On rising in the morning the eyes should be bathed gently in cold water. Twenty passes are said to be decidedly strengthening. While using them closely they should be rested at intervals of an hour or two, for the strain of constant reading, etc., is like that of extending the arms at a certain height immovably. Imagine, then, the taxing of the eyes, which cannot complain save after years of irreparable neglect. When dust settles in the eyes warm water will soothe them of any inflammation.

SUFFERED With Biliousness and Sick Headache
