The Household.

The happiest households are those that do not let die out the sentiment connected with various anniversaries. Although gift giving r recognition of such events in a suitable way may be out of the question, owing to he straitened circumstances of those within the gates, there can yet be a little air of festivity when mother's or father's birthday omes round or some wedding anniversary is to be celebrated. An extra dish, a little bunch of flowers or some special music pre-pared for the occasion will show the kindly spirit and the loving remembrance that coun more than the money value of any gift. As the children grow up, if these festivals are encouraged, they will have much to look forward to and much more to remember in the years to come when they go out to do battle with the world and find that sentiment is crushed underfoot and affection is regarded only as a side issue. Life is full of beauty if we only know how o gather it into our bins and storehouses. There need not be great wealth nor worldly honor, but a loyal clinging together of parents and children, marked by happenings that have a direct bearing on each one's individual hiscavating for the cellar yesterday, and papa tory, will join the circle closer together and expects the house to be finished in about 18
