

welcome and appreciation with all. We feel that our minglings, socially and religiously, are reasons of much pleasure, and I trust profit, and I have never felt more keenly the need of earnest care among Friends, that without prejudices or antagonism to others, we guard well the interests of our own Society. We are confident of our principles, when compared with others, under the light of Divine truth. The longer we mingle with our Friends here in the west (as elsewhere) the more we are strengthened to labor in the cause, believing that the greatest demand of the age can best be met by the practical application of the truth in the simple garb or presentation that we as a people give it. We regret to find too many that bear the name by inheritance, that come far short of reflecting it to the world, and yet we would not censure, but rather hope that none may allow another to take their crown.

Iowa is a fine agricultural country, with well improved farms, many large houses and barns, leaving evidence of thrift and comfort, but we are quite surprised to find the mercury down nearly to zero (and one a. m. reported below) with some snow, but not sleighing, but this is not common so early, and the farmers feel it very much, as there is much corn yet to be husked.

Our time is very closely occupied, and will be until the Quarterly Meeting at Marietta on the 3rd and 4th of next month, after which we shall move more rapidly homeward.

ISAAC WILSON.

Highland, Ia., 11 mo. 25, 1892.

Last year only five deaths occurred on all the railways of the United Kingdom, while in the streets of London 147 deaths and 5,784 personal injuries resulted from vehicles of some sort. This confirms the remark of Mr. Charles Francis Adams, who said no safer place in the world could be found than in the express train on one of the main railways of England.

BALTIMORE YEARLY MEETING.

EDITORS YOUNG FRIENDS' REVIEW.

Thinking that a brief account of the proceedings of our recent Yearly Meeting might interest some of the readers of the REVIEW, which includes many of our own members, who were not favored to mingle with us, upon this cherished occasion, we append the following for their perusal:—The meetings held on First-day were though: to be of more than usual interest, as well as all of the meetings throughout. We were favored with the company of several ministering Friends from other Yearly Meetings, and for their presence with, and labors of love amongst us, together with other deeply interested Friends, we were made to feel truly grateful. These occasions are felt by every true lover of our Society to be most precious opportunities, creating within the minds of those assembled new resolves, redoubled energy, and a greater determination to perform the various duties assigned them, that they are called upon to fill, in the furtherance of the work, the labor of our beloved Society, whose futurity, judging by the deep interest manifested in its behalf by all classes and all ages, is most encouraging. On First-day morning the large meeting room, facing the Park avenue end of the house, was filled to completion with an attentive and deeply interested audience, and the same might be said of the meeting held in the Laurens street end, better known as the Men's Meeting Room. The youth's meeting, held on the afternoon of the same day, evinced a deep and growing interest in this comparatively new field of labor amongst us, and yet though, in its infantile stage. This awakening, this engrafting, this culturing of the tender buds, this means of interesting and enlisting the youth, this advancing and enhancing their growth, cannot fail with such ground work to germinate, and become deep rooted, firmly implanted, and