

something to be amazed at a remarkable novel."
—R. Ellis Roberts, in The Daily News.

THE PORCELAIN LADY.

"If the book is light, its title alone would show us that it was meant to be so; the chief quality of the book is its readableness, and it is full of kindness and cleverness too."—B. S., in The Manchester Guardian.

HANDS UP!

"It is all that a book of this kind should be it has a flavour of its own that makes it memorable."—
Edwin Pugh, in The Bookman.

TWO GENERATIONS.

"Mr. Niven moves from strength to strength. His 'Justice of the Peace,' with its powerful analysis of conflicting temperaments, its deep consciousness of family life, and its pathos, attracted well-merited notice. His 'Two Generations,' cast in the same mould, shows an even firmer grip of realities."—W. L. Courtney, in The Daily Telegraph.

DEAD MEN'S BELLS.

"Written with insight and distinction of style. Uncle Walter, Mr. Wylie, and delightful Cousin Effie are creations we shall not easily forget."—John F. Harris, in The Bookman.

THE S.S. GLORY.

. "I don't see how you can Fail to enjoy the 'S.S. Glory.'"

Mr. Punch.

PENNY SCOT'S TREASURE.

"This is not just a blazing adventure story of conventional fiction, but a fine narrative of adventure. The journeying through the enchanted woods will appeal to the judicious reader."—A. N. M., in The Manchester Guardian.
