

of all kinds are avoided. The contraction of a pneumonia or of a fever in early life may be regarded as an accident which has cut short the normal duration of life.