Mr. Hector has lost none of his unctuousness of delivery. He took occasion, however, to administer a severe rebuke to the Ontarto government's license act, declaring it to be "rank injustice to hold that 40 Miquor men should be considered as good as 60 men who opposed the traffic."

Mr. Hector urged that the church fight with vigor and fight all the time. An hotelkeeper of Woodbridge had remarked to him that "whenever the Christians get together the hotelkeepers had to get out of business."

"When the Christians shall vote as they pray," was the refrain of a duet interpolated, being sung with good vocal effect by Mrs. Hector and Miss Hector.

"The trouble is that Christians do vote as they pray," remarked the speaker. He thus explained: "When a man prays he shuts his eyes, and that's ing."

His watchword for the cause was unserved the characters on the American stage, will be the attraction at the Princess Theatre for the week beginning with a matine to-day in George V. Hobart's new musical vaudeville, "The Ham Tree." This plece was first staged at the New York Theatre in August of last year, and, after a long run, toured the principal cities. It was revived in July last at the New York Theatre in August of last year, and, after a long run, toured the principal cities. It was revived in July last at the Ilew York Theatre, where, for several weeks, it played to capacity. "The Ham Tree" is a serio-comic story staged in three acts, built up on Mc-Intyre & Heath's vaudeville sketch, "The Georgia Minstrels." With this as a foundation. Mr. Hobart erected a comic structure which closely holds the attention of the audience to the final scene. The scene represents a hotel in Marion, N.C., a water tank on a railroad in Delaware, a wood near the watertank, and the drawing room of a Fifth-avenue mansion.
