The Young People's Missionary Society in connection with Crescent Street Church was organized a year ago last October, at a meeting held at the Manse.

The Society consists of a number of young ladies, whose aim and object in organizing such a Society was to increase their knowledge and interest in Missions.

With this object in view, meetings have been held on the first Monday of every month, excluding the summer months.

At these meetings, besides Bible study, the study of the lives of such eminent Missionaries as John Geddie and William Carey has been taken up.

Music also has been introduced into the programme of every meeting, and has proved quite an acquisition.

At Christmas time the Society has endeavored to contribute to the needs of the less fortunate, and this year we sent a box to Mr. Coté, French Presbyterian Minister at Namur.

Thanks to the kindness of friends, the box was well filled with candies, oranges and toys, as well as many useful articles, and in order to prepare these, sewing meetings were organized and held every week for five weeks previous to the holiday season.

We have to thank the Ladies' Aid Society for a most liberal donation to our box.

Through the kindness of Dr. and Mrs. Mackay, our closing meeting last year was of a very enjoyable social character.

Although the Society is still very young, it is encouraging to note that during the past season the membership list has increased, and the attendance at the meetings is on the whole good.
