NEWS-THE MARKETS, ETC. It is mentioned as something remarkable that Jonathan Duane Wheeler of nington, Conn., owns and occupies a Letter Heads, Note Heads, Bill Heads, farm that has descended to him from his great-great-grandfather who lived 160 years ago. It has never passed from the family of its original occupant, whose the family of its original occupant, whose ashes mingle with those of seven generations of his descendants. Circumstances of this kind are probably rarer on this continent than in any other civilized country in the world because the unrest of the pilgrims and the cavaliers, the pioneers of Canadian life, is inherited by their posterity and 160 years more will probably pass by before it will be eliminated. Wherever chance places him the American, and in a considerable measure the Canadian, is at home, if he can be said to have a home anywhere and in consequence the ties of kinship arcless binding here than in many places elsewhere. The man who keeps his head cool and his feet warm has little to fear from pneumonia or kindred complaints. To keep the feet warm it is necessary to keep them dry, and this is more effectually done by the use of the Spanish glycerne oil liquid dressing than by the use of overshoes. It is a famous leather preserver and polish, put up in boxes of one doz. and supplied to the trade by Notthrop & Co. of this city.
