ANOTHER FERRY COLLAPSE.

The Carleton ferry was in trouble again this morning. The Western Extension was on the route, and about 7.30 this morning and highly respected farmers of the country in the East Side, she caught her rudder against the abutment of the floats and broke it. The tide was very low, or perhaps the accident would not have occurred. Supt. Glasgow says he thinks it must be due to carelessness somewhere.

The tug Neptune had to be requisitioned, but luckly no fatal accidents have occurred, as was the case during the tug service when the Western Extension split her condensor a short time ago.

The Oaugondy was floated out at high tide and brought into service about one o'clock.

The extent of the deware to the Western Extension was the case during the tug service when the western Extension was floated out at high tide and brought into service about one o'clock. The extent of the damage to the Western does away with the central operator, each subscriber making his own confered the rudder braces may be broken, which case new ones will be required.

While walking about the streets of New York City one morning he saw a teamster whipping a balky horse.

"Stop that, you brute!" he exclaimed, "or I'll have you locked up inside of five minutes! Why don't you try kindness on the animal? Don't you suppose a horse can be reached by a kind word, the same as a human belief."

ing?"

"I b'lieve ye're right, sor," replied the teamster, a quick-witted Irishman who, with all his fault of temper, was not a bad man at heart; "an' if a harse has feelin's, sor, don't ye s'pose his dhriver has too? Thry a koind wor-rd on th' dhriver, if ye plase."

It is said that Mr. Bergh was always afterwards kindly-spoken in his protests.
