City to appeal OMB ruling

Mississauga will appeal a decision by the Ontario Municipal Board to the Ontario cabinet.

The decision involves a development in Mississauga Meadows by Central Parkway Developments, owned by developer William Sorokolit.

Sorokolit refused to dedicate a 40-foot-strip of land along Burnhamthorpe Road to the city at no cost. The strip, which has been dedicated to the city by other developers in the Meadows and North North Dixie, is designated for potential use for future light rapid transit. The board ruled that Sorokolit was not required to give the land, but the city should pay for it if it requires it.

New greens

Site inspections are almost completed for the planting of more than 100,000 shrubs and trees of various species in the Credit River Watershed early in 1979.

Under the Credit Valley Conservation Authority's private land reforestation program, 85,000 seedling trees will be planted for landowners in the valley.

Approximately 20,000 trees will be planted on authority lands and 1,000 shrubs and larger trees will provide landscaping in the multiple-use conservation areas.

These choices easy

Regional committee elections took place with so little fuss that it prompted new Mississauga Councillor Marg Marland to ask if things always went that quickly.

All chairmen were acclaimed to their posts except Brampton Councillor Terry Miller, who defeated Councillor Ken Dear for the chairmanship of the administration and finance committee. Caledon Councillor Emile Kolb was made vice-chairman.

Caledon Mayor John Clarkson chairs the public works committee with Brampton councillor Dianne Sutter as vice-chairman.

Mississauga Councillor Larry Taylor and Brampton Councillor Ellen Mitchell are chairman and vice-chairman, respectively of the social services and the non-profit housing corporation committees.

Mississauga Councillor Fred Hooper is chairman of the planning committee and Caledon Councillor Bill Hunter the vice-chairman.
