

*God grant, dear lad, that once again we walk the moors together, And greet the sun and feel the wind blow fresh on face and lips,
Or stretch and dream upon the down in golden summer weather,
And watch our thoughts flock from us like the swift white wings of ships.*