away from the mother. There is no reason at all why pigs cannot be sold out weighing twelve score at ten months old, if they have been properly fed and kept going steadily on. We want fleshy pigs. The proper, and doubtless the best, month in the year for young pigs is march. It is surprising how they grow as the days lengthen. Another great help is in giving them a run from the yard away from their mother, to a paddock; this supplemented, after shutting them up, by giving them a few mangels, green vetches, or beans, they grow rapidly, and keep in far better health than when forced with meal and dry corn twice a day.

Given a limited quantity of beans, maize, or peas once a day, then put on to meal in October, there is ample time to finish them for bacon by the end of the year. Pigs are often supposed to be specially dirty. I do not believe in that, generally speaking; if they are kept nicely cleaned they do better, and in addition make the most valuable of manure.

After a sow leaves her young and returns to the boar, she will do well with a few roots, swedes or mangels, and a pint of beans or maize and water for one-fourth of the year, which certainly means no more than two shillings a week. This is a very economical way of feeding, and that may and can be lessened by giving them a portion of the offal corn which must be to a large extent wasted if not used.

Without an Equal

Fred. H. Gould, Renfrew Co., Ont., in sending in his renewal, writes:—
"I like The Farming World and consider it to be a first class farmer's journal without an equal."

Berkshire Importations

Mr. W. H. Durham, Islington, Ont., has been making some extensive importations of Berkshires this season. He has now in his pens one hundred head and has on the water twenty more. He has been having some of the best stock to be had in England, and has now in his possession all the daughters, excepting one, of the great boar, Baron Kitchener, one of the show pigs of Britain. In his lot now on the water is a brood of Polegate Doctor, a Royal winner, and also the champion sow at the Royal.

Mr. Durham will hold two important public sales of Berkshires, one at Toronto early in September, and the other in Ohio early in October. He will put up a good show at the coming Toronto fair.
