CARLETON'S Condition Powders for Horses and Cattle.

The changes of weather and season, with the change of use and feed, have a very great effect upon the blood and shauous fluids of horses. It is at these times they require an assistant to nature to throw off any disorder of the fluids of the body that may have been imbibed, and which, if not attended to, will result in the Yellow Water, Heaves, Worms, Bots, &c. All of which will be prevented by giving one of these powders, and will cure when disease appears, if used in time. They purify the blood, remove all inflamation and fever, loosen the skin, cleanse the water, and invigorate the whole body, enabling them to do more work with the same feed. The action of these powders is direct upon all the secretive glands, and therefore has the same effect upon the flore, Ox, and all and all Herbiverous animals—all diseases arising from or producing a bad state of the blood, are speedily cured by them.

The Sailors' Temperance Meeting.

Last evening attended the mariners' temperance meeting. While one of the gentlemen was speaking, a man intoxicated came staggering up to him, looked him earnestly in the face till he paused, and then said to him: "You mean me, do you, Captain?"

"Mean you?" said the other; "what did I "Why, the yarn you were spinning about that old salt! Did you mean me?" "No, I spoke of another; but I think it would do very well for you too." "Well, so I think myself, and I'm ashamed of it. So here I'll knock off. Give me a pen; let me sign your pledge. May be I'm a little too drunk, but I'll try." The secretary handed him a pen. In attempting to subscribe his name, he let fall upon the page a large drop of ink. "There," he exclaimed, "that's a big period;

and a period marks the end of a sentence; so here's an end of my grog! Look at me, ship-mates! You think I'm pretty much gone by the board, and so I ail; but I begin to get sober; I know what I've done; and you may call me a liar if I don't give grog a wide berth here-

The orator staggered to his seat amidst roars of laughter and shouts of applause. Whether he will keep his word, time must determine. It would be very questionable, at least, if he were not a sailor. But such is the sailor's sense of honour, that he is seldom known to violate a vow. Mr. Chase tells us that many have signed the pledge in a state of intoxication, and adhered to it with sacred fidelity.

I noticed a well dressed young man, who led into the house another so affected with liquor that he appeared to walk with difficulty. friend placed him upon the front seat, and sat down by his side. About the middle of the meeting the former rose to make a speech; and the latter, seizing the opportunity, stealthily left the house. The speaker finished abruptly, followed the fugitive and brought him back, and before the exercises closed, led him to the table, put a pen in his hand, and guided it while he wrote his name. I was afterwards informed that this young man bimself, about six months ago, was brought, intoxicated, to the temperance meeting, and persuaded to sign the pledge; that he has ever since been a sober man, has lately joined the church, gives evidence of genuine piety, and promise of great usefulness among the sailors.—Temperance Home.

Testimeny of Two Clergymen.

The Rev. W. Whitehead, A. M., vicar of Chard, and a magistrate of the county of Somerset, occupied the chair in the evening. The reverend Chairman said it was with pleasure he appeared before them in support of a cause which they all had so much at heart; and when he saw so many happy faces before him he was amply repaid for any little inconvenience his attending might have occasioned himself. He had been a minister of the Gospel for upwards of 40 years, and a magistrate for upwards of 30 years, and he could with confidence assure them, both as a clergyman and a magistrate, that in the whole course of his experience he had not found so great an enemy to the diffusion and influence of the Gospel, as the drinking habits of the people of this country.— He would go further and say, he had never yet found so decided an enemy as strong drink to the peace and good order of society, and that the drinking usages of the people were in deed and in truth the foster-fathers of the greatest portion of the crime prevailing amongst us. Further, he would say-and he said it fearless of contradiction -that infidelity and socialism, a mere formalism, and a total indifference to religion, were engendered with the habit of intemperance which so extensively prevailed. Many were the means resorted to, to cry down the advocates of the only method that had yet been found effectual, under God's blessing, of stemming the torrent of corruption, but he entreated all who heard him to meet such opposition in a christian spirit.

The Rev. W. Gale, A. M., vicar of Pylle, Somerset, assured them of his unshrinking attachment to the cause of Total Abstinence, for he believed the curse of drunkenness afforded the greatest obstacle to the spread of the Gospel, to the diffusion of moral philanthropy, and to the sanitary improvement of the condition of the people. / He would not recommend to his people the adoption of the Total Abstinence principle till he had tried it himself, but, having practised it for some time, he found himself so much better, both mentally and physically-in mind as well as in pocket-that he could not do less than advise others to adopt it also. He had now been a Teetotaller six years, and every day confirmed him in his adhesion to the practice of Abstinence.-Bristol Temperance Herald.

The Saratoga Convention.

A very striking thought was advanced by one of the speakers at this Convention and supported by very cogent reasoning. He boldly affirmed that it was much easier to administer a prohibitory law than any other kind of law against the liquor traffic. If, said he, you interfere with the sale of intoxicating drinks partially, you arouse all the enormous capital which is engaged in the various ramifications of that business to active hostility, and every one knows how powerful capital is and how terribly its recoil upon political measures. In the case of a partially restrictive law all this capital continues in the business and consequently continues to work against the law. But let the business be uncompronising and absolute, and the capital all leaves the business as in Maine, and seeks other channels in which its own interest requires it not only not to oppose the law but actually to sustain it.

In like manner said the same speaker, (Dr. Jewett, of Boston,) a partially effective law only irritates and stirs up to increasing opposition the whole of the terrible appetite which rum has created; but a prohibitory law by depriving that appetite of what it feeds on, removes it entirely: and after the first month the drunkards, tipplers, and moderate drinkers, who were loudest against it, would themselves cast a majority in favour of the law, and against returning to the former state -Montreal Witness. of things.

Asylum for Inebriates,

I have been to Maine, and seen the wonderful Asylum for Inebriates, much larger than the Crystal Palace, being 225 miles long, 195 miles wide, and reaching to the heavens. It contains within itself vast forests, sweet green fields, beautiful gardens, and fine streams of water. Here the poor inebriate can roam ad libitum, confined by no bars or bolts, and is perfectly safe, and completely cured. It is kept by one Neal Dow, a man of short name, and small in stature, and indomitable energy. If any New York gentleman has a drunken son, I would advise him to send him to Maine. And if our corporation would send thither all who are committed weekly for drunkenness to the Tombs, and support them there a year, they would save much expense and trouble, and receive them back useful citizens. When I was there a few envious spirits were crying out against it, and a New York traveller was furious because he could not find in it a drop of the drunkard's drink: but I believe it will stand, and hope it will be a model for one in every State of the Union. If this information will be of value to any who have drunken relations, or to our city corporation, I shall be happy to have imparted it .- Cor. of the N. Y. Jour. of Com.
