

A MONSTER OF THE DEEP.

In some parts of the ocean there are enormous sea animals called Sepia, which are a kind of ptypi. They have very long legs, and are said sometimes to seize upon the coral divers along the coast of Italy. Mr Beale tells the following adventure with a creature of this sort:—

While upon the Bouin Islands, searching for shells on the rocks which had just been left by the receding tide, I was astonished at seeing at my feet a most extraordinary looking animal crawling towards the retreating surf. I had never seen one like it before. It was creeping on its eight legs, which from their soft and flexible nature, bent considerably under the weight of its body, so that it was lifted by the efforts of its tentacles only a small distance from the rocks.

It appeared much alarmed on seeing me, and made every effort to escape, while I was not much in the humor to endeavor to capture so ugly a customer, whose appearance excited a feeling of disgust, not unmixed with fear. I however, endeavored to prevent its escape, by pressing on one of its legs with my foot; but, although I used considerable force for that purpose, its strength was so great that it several times quickly liberated its member, in spite of all the efforts I could employ in this way, on wet and slippery rocks. I now laid hold of one of the tentacles with my hand, and held it firmly, so that the limb appeared as if it would be torn asunder by our united strength.

I gave it a powerful jerk, wishing to disengage it from the rocks to which it clung so forcibly by its suckers, which it effectually resisted, but the moment after, the apparently enraged animal lifted its head, with its large eyes projecting from the middle of its body and letting go its hold of the rocks sprang suddenly upon my arm, which I had previously bared to my shoulder for the purpose of thrusting it into holes in the rocks to discover shells, and clung with its suckers to it with great power, endeavoring to get its beak, which I could now see, between the roots of his arms, in a position to bite.

A sensation of horror pervaded my whole frame, when I found this monstrous animal, for it was about four feet long, fixed so firmly to my arm. Its cold slimy grasp was extremely sickening, and I immediately called aloud to the captain, who was also searching for shells at some distance, to come and release me from my disgusting assailant. He quickly arrived, and taking me down to the boat, during which time I was employed in keeping the beak away from my hand, quickly released me by destroying my tormentor with the boat knife, when I disengaged it by portions at a time. This animal was that species of Sepia which is called by whalers "rock squid." Thus are these remarkable creatures, from the different adaptation of their tentacles and modifications of their bodies capable of sailing, flying, swimming, and creeping on the shore, while their senses, if we may judge from the elaborate mechanism of their organs, must possess corresponding acuteness and perfection.

Sir D. Brewster on Electro-Biology.—A Dr Darling is at present astonishing the savans of Edinburgh by his experiments in this new science. Sir D Brewster has published a letter in the Courant, in which, after referring to one of the doctor's public exhibitions, he adds:—I think it right also to state, in justice to Mr Darling, that the wonderful effects which he produces are best seen in private, when the spectator is near the operator and his patient; and that I had an opportunity of closely watching the effects which he produced upon an officer of the army, of high character and undoubted veracity, at Professor Gregory's on Tuesday last. The gentleman present was the Duke of Argyll, Mr Callender of Craigforth, Col. Gore Brown, of the 21st Fusiliers, Professor Gregory, and myself; and I believe they were all as convinced as I was that the phenomena which we witnessed were real phenomena, and as well established as any other facts in physical science.

The process by which the operator produces them—the mode by which that process acts upon the mind of the patient—and the reference of the phenomena to some general law in the constitution of man—may long remain unknown; but it is not difficult to see in the recent discoveries of M Dubois Remond and Matteucci, and in the laws which regulate the relative intensity of the external and internal impressions on the nerves of sensation, some not very indistinct indications of that remarkable process by which minds of peculiar sensibility are temporarily placed under the dominion of physical influences developed and directed by some living agent.

Quaker's Courtship.—"Martha, does thee love me?" asked a Quaker youth of one at whose shrine his heart's fondest feelings had been offered up. "Why Seth," answered she, "we are commanded to love one another—are we not?" "Ah, Martha! but dost thou regard me with that feeling the world calls love?" "I hardly know what to tell thee, Seth: I have tried to bestow my love on all: but I have sometimes thought, perhaps, that thee was getting more than thy share."

Here's till ye Jenny.—An Irishman had been sick for a long time, and when in this state would occasionally cease breathing, and life apparently be extinct for some time, when he would again come to. On one of these occasions, when he had awakened from his sleep, Patrick asked him—"An' how'll we know, Jenny, when your dead—you'r aither wakin' up every time!" "Bring me a glass o' grogg, an' say to me;—Here's till ye, Jenny, an' if I don't rise up an' thrink, then bury me!"

Old Sir James Herring was remonstrated with for not rising earlier—"I can make up my mind to it," said he, "but cannot make up my body."
