OVER 800 GERMAN WOUNDED LEFT ON THE FIELD OF BATTLE

Kaiser's Army of the Meuse Was Mowed Down in Thousands as an Answer to Demanding Free Road Through Belgium Territory.

BRUSSELS, via Paris, Aug. 6.—Several thousand dead and wounded is the toll paid by the German army of the Meuse for its attack on Liege. Routed at half a dozen points, their splendid regiments decimated by a terrible artillery and rifle fire, surprised and outmanoeuvring by an inferior force, the vanguard of the main German army advancing through Belgium yesterday fell back to entrenched positions to await reinforcements. The Belgians made good their promise to the Kaiser's government they would resist to the uttermost the German violation of their neutrality and the despatches from the front recorded reverse after reverse for the German arms. The attack by the Germans upon the Belgian positions before Liege was a total failure, and they have been unable to renew the assault.

Eight Hundred Wounded.
 The fighting yesterday was heavy and continuous. The fortified position of Liege had to support the general shock of the German attack. The impression that the Kaiser's troops had been pushing rapidly ahead confident that the Belgian troops would make no serious attempt to retard their advance. Infantry and cavalry detachments marched into Belgian territory unsupported by artillery and the Belgians with their big guns placed at strategic points were able to inflict terrible loss on the German columns. At one point a German company of ten officers and eighty men was surprised and only ten men survived the Belgian fire.

Prior to the attack on Liege General von Tummich, commanding the German army of the Meuse, issued a proclamation, calling for an open road through Belgium for the advance of his forces.

The proclamation read:
 "To my great regret the German troops have been forced to cross the frontier. Belgian neutrality having already been violated by French officers, who, disguised entered the country in automobiles. Our greatest desire is to avoid a conflict between peoples who have always been friends and once allies. Remember Waterloo, where the German armies helped to found your country's independence.

"But we must have free passage. The destruction of bridges tunnels or railways must be considered as hostile acts. I hope the German army of the Meuse will not be called upon to fight you. We wish for an open road guarantee that the Belgian population will not have to suffer the horrors of war. We will pay for provisions and our soldiers will show themselves to be the best of friends of a people for whom we have the greatest esteem and the deepest sympathy.

"Your prudence and patriotism will show you that it is your duty to prevent your country from being plunged into the horrors of war."

King in Command.
 King Albert in accordance with the treaty between France and Belgium, has assumed command of the troops and has issued an inspiring proclamation to the army, in which he declares that "the perfidy of a haughty neighbor demands that Belgium shall defend her honor and independence."

He bids the Belgian soldier to remember the army's glorious deeds of the past and show themselves worthy of the trust placed in them.

French troops are now moving to join the Belgian forces and the way has been opened for the co-operation of British and French troops with the Belgians by the action of the Belgian Government in inviting the assistance of the allied troops with the Belgian army and giving orders to the Belgian Provincial Governors not to regard the movements of the French troops as a violation of the frontier.

Reports that the Germans had violated Dutch neutrality are apparently premature. While martial law was proclaimed in all parts of Holland, it was officially announced that up to the present time the Germans have not violated the Dutch frontier.

German dirigibles are continually reconnoitering over Belgian cities. Several have been hovering over Brussels and the residents of the Belgian capital, in a state of exasperation, are attacking the Germans in the city.

Bridges Destroyed
 The German forces are reported to have been checked by the line of forts in the Province of Liege. German troops attempted to cross the river Meuse on a pontoon bridge, but a sharp broadside by the batteries of the forts destroyed the bridge as soon as it was completed. Later the invaders succeeded in crossing the river near Maestricht.

The Balkan War Office announced last night that fierce fighting had occurred in the environs of Liege and that so far as the Belgians were concerned the situation is excellent.

"The Germans," the announcement says, "were driven back by a heroic attack made by a Belgian mixed brigade which already had earned for itself the highest honors. No German who passed the fort survived."

Newspapers here state that an early landing of British troops in Belgium is expected.

In the fighting between German and Belgians that preceded the capture of Vise a platoon of Prussian cavalry was almost annihilated by the enfilading fire of the Belgians from a building on the bank of the river.

The Prussians in revenge, it is stated, fired on civilians and set fire to the town.

At Wlemalle, near Argenteau, a Belgian force surprised a body of Prussians and killed 70 out of ten officers and 80 men. The Belgian losses were two officers killed and ten men wounded.

The town of Argenteau was entered by the Germans and set afire.

The efforts of the German invading army to repair the bridges over the River Meuse, destroyed by the Belgians in order to impede their advance, have so far failed, and the resistance of the Belgian troops has been so hot and effective that the Germans have been unable to get across the river or to capture any of the Belgian fortresses.

The losses of the Germans are unknown, but are very great. Considerable numbers of wounded Germans are being transported in automobiles to the hospital at Maestricht, in the south-east of Holland.

The Belgian artillery along the line of the Meuse kept up a heavy fire on the German positions throughout last night and this morning.
