Did Taft Mean It?

Manila, Oct. 21.—At a banquet given in his honor in this city Saturday night, United States Secretary of War William H. Taft, made a most significant statement. He was referring to the fact that he had already visited the Philippines three times, and in saying that he purposed to come here again, he used this phraseology: "I hope in another two years to visit, Manila again, but then I probably will come as a private citizen."

The significance of Mr. Taft's statement, in view of his probable nomination for the Presidency next year, did not seem to strike his andience.

"What I cannot understand," he said, "is that with all the talk of wireless communication over long distances, cables are now being laid for short distances. Marconi has much yet to accomplish before his company can be considered a competitor."

The four ounce glove was unknown to the ancient pugilist. When the boxers and fighters came together in the old days of Greece they wore up-on their hands the cestus, which was in itself a terrible adjunct to any fighter. But Dr. Daniel G. Briten discovered that there was sometimes attached to the cestus a deadlier weapon, consisting of a three pronged fork

Dr. Brinton, who found this specimen, gave it to the museum of archaeology in the University of Pennsylvania. Classical literature has frequent ref-erences to the myrmex, which is de-scribed as the deadliest weapon of the ancient puglist. The 11ght hand was swathed in tough hide, bound in place with thongs and supplemented by small knobs of lead or iron, to which was affixed the myrmex. Dr. Brinton made his discovery in Paris by examining the Greek and Roman marbles in the Louvre. One of these groups represented a fighter bearing on his right fist the cestus and myrmex.

Nature has just one p'gment on her pallette with which she produces all the marvelous tints of heauty, and that one pigment is the blood. The shell-like pink beneath the finger nails, the delicate rose of the cheek, the cherry ripeness of the lips, the irridescent brilliance of the eyes are produced by the blood. Just as the permanence of a beautiful painting will depend upon the purity of the colors with which it is painted, so the permanence of beauty depends on the purity of the blood. Paint, powder and cosmetics won't avail to preserve beauty. Beauty begins in the blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a true beautifier, because it provides for nature that pure blood with which alone she can paint. The use of this medicine will cleanse the skin, heighten the complexion, brighten the eyes, and give the face and form that radiance of health which is the greatest charm of beauty.

TOLLS FROM HUDSON BAY. Canada's Jurisdiction Asserted and Maintained.

The Canadian Department of Customs recently established a customs port of entry at Burwell, the harbor to the west of Cape Chudley, on Hudson Strait, thereby solving the problem of asserting and maintaining Canadian jurisdiction over Hudson's Bay and the more northerly waters. The first collections of duties were made by Major Moodie, of the Northwest Mounted Police, three years ago, and were paid willingly by the Scottish whalers operating in the north, and with less readiness by the United States whalers in Hudson's Bay. Duties were exacted only upon such goods as the skippers declared were intended for trading with the Eskimos, ships' stores being untaxed. Since that time there has been no trouble, captains of United States vessels readily complying with the Canadian regulations.

sels readily complying with the Canadian regulations.

It has been intended to extend the jurisdiction of the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police over the entire Hudson Bay and adjacent districts in Franklin, by means of a series of posts, and to maintain communication between them by means of a patrol steamer. For this purpose the Rouville was built at the Canadian Government shipyard in Sorel. But a few weeks ago it was décided that her services would not be required, as the police had established an overland route from Fort Churchill on Hudson Bay to Winnipeg, while the compliance of foreign whaling masters with the customs laws seemed to render the outlay for a patrol vessel unnecessary.

The Gieneairn was bound from Rochester to Seattle and Tacoma with a general cargo, and went ashore at Cape San Paulo, off Terra del Fuego, on July 22, during fog. The Giencairn afterwards sank. On learing the sinking ship the misfortunes of the party were intensified by the capsizing of one of the two lifeboats which were launched. Seaman Morley was washed away, and the dead body of Seaman Schmidt was found under the overturned boat about two hours after it had capsized. A Swedish seaman named Edward Gustafsom had a perilous struggle for life. He scrambled on to the top of the upset boat, and despite the severity of the weather and a violent snowstorm, clung to his precarious position until rescued. On reaching the shore the ship-wrecked party, which included the two ladies, made wood fires and secured shelter as best they could, erecting temporary tents. The bitter coldness of the atmosphere, however, and the scantiness of provisions were keenly felt, more particularly by the ladies. They came into contact with a tribe of Indians inhabiting the territory on which they were stranded, and, learning that a British missionary was stationed some miles away, they succeeded in getting into communication with him. Horses were found for the two ladies, and the men walked 25 miles to the mission settlement. The remainder of the overland fourney was made by the whole of the company mounted on horseback. Irish Quagmire.

In a wildfowl shooting expedition in Ireland a gentleman named Findlater got as near death as he is everlikely to do. He was wildfowl shooting along the Belfast Lough strandmear Holywood, County Down, and stumbled into a quagmire.

Struggle as he would he could not extricate himself; in fact, his effortate escape made him but sink the deeper. Another terror was added to the situation by the in-coming tide, which threatened him with drowning even if he escaped being smothered in the mud.

When he had almost given up hope, some passengers in a passing train noticed his predicament, and on arriving at Holywood telephoned teriliysburn and Sydenham, from whence two men named Mooney and Morgan, wearing long boots, immediately set out to the rescue. When they arrived the mud had reached. Findlater's beard, and Mooney, ignoring all risk, gallantly walked intenthe mire, sinking quickly far above the mire, sinking quickly far above the knees. Morgan stood nearer the edge holding his hand. Mooney took off a belt he was wearing and threw it to Findlater, who caught the end of it, and by this means they supported him for some time.

But unaided they could not extricate the sportsman, while they themselves were sinking deeper and deeper. All three were becoming thoroughly exhausted when two or three other workmen arrived with a rope, and after much exertion all were dragged to safety.

Gambling in Australia.

Gambling in Australia.

The Australian correspondent of The London Morning Post writes: The gambling evil in Sydney and Mebbourne had reached a stage which demanded drastic measures. The main streets of Sydney were thickly dotted with hetting clubs and shops, which the law was formerly unable to control. Almost in the heart of Mebbourne the famous "Collingwood Tote" carried on a flourishing unlawful business, and that, too, under the very eyes of the police. The most skilled detectives found it next to impossible to gain access to the premises which were fortified against surprise and provided with numerous means of escape. It became manifestly impossible to secure the conviction of the conductors. Places of this kind have been absolutely suppressed, both in Melbourne and Sydney, by enachments which empower the Suprems Court, on the affidavit of a police official showing reasonable grounds, to declare such premises common gaming houses. After such a declaration any person found in the "quarantined" premises, or entering or leaving them, or even any building which is used as a means of access to them, may be immediately arrested, and unless he can prove that he was therefor a lawful purpose he becomes liable to six months' imprisonment. An owner who knowingly allows his premises to be used for gaming, or as a means of access to a gaming house, is subjected to a very heavy penalty. If he discovers that they are being used for such a purpose he is not only entitled but is bound to determine the lease. These enactments have produced their object far more quickly and effectively than is generally the case with measures of social reform. They were not intended to restrict the temptations of the young and to limit the opportunities of the hardened gambler. This they have done to a very large extent. So far as one cambidecover every betting place of any temptations of the young and to limit the opportunities of the hardened gambler. This they have done to a very large extent. So far as one can discover every betting place of any size in Sydney and Melbourne has been closed.
