This is written by a well known and popular author and was published but lately. It is a very interesting story and widely read. The scene is England in the older times and its portrayal of the historical characters and the customs of the age adds to its interest. It is of course a love story with plenty of sentiment, romance and adventure to make it spicy. Don't miss reading it you will be sure to enjoy it.

The ice began running in the Upsalquitch on Wednesday and since the ice in the lower Restigouche is so unusually solid for this time of the year grave fears of the situation are entertained. It is stated that the ice in the estuary has not been as solid in thirty years as it is at present for the time of year. Those who had their eye on the thermometer of last winter will see no reason why the ice should not have a fair share of stability.

The Seven Golden Cities.

The "Seven Golden Cities" one of the most popular legends of the latter part of the dark ages, were said to be situated on an island west of the African coast. The island is represented as abounding in gold, with magnificent houses and temples, "the high towers of which shown at a great distance."

The legend also relates that at the time of the conquest of Spain and Portugal by the Moors, when the inhabitants fled in every direction to escape slavery, seven bishops, followed by a great number of people, took to ships and put boldly out on the high seas. After toiling about for some time they landed on an unknown island, the famous spot which in after years became the seat of the "Seven Golden Cities."

"This island," Heylyn says, "was exactly in midocean." After all had landed safely the wise old bishops burned the ships to prevent their followers from deserting and founded the cities which have become so famous in song and story. This mysterious island was often sought by the early navigators. Those who want in search of it and never returned were popularly believed to have been detained by its inhabitants.

A Happy Thought.

"Your majesty," advises the head physician to the cannibal king, "had best abandon your meat diet for a few weeks."

"What shall I do?" muses the king, a hungry look spreading over his countenance.

"Ah," he smiles as a happy thought strikes him, "those last missionaries who came to the island said they were vegetarians."

A Happy Thought.

A Frenchman was paying his first visit to London and was walking through Hyde park on one of the many foggy metropolitan mornings with an English friend.

"Papa," said the boy, "when you say in your advertisements that your goods are acknowledged by connoisseurs to be the best what do you mean by connoisseurs?"

"A connoisseur, my boy," answered the great manufacturer, "is an eminent authority—an authority, in short, admits that our goods are the best."
