George S. Lyon, of Toronto, the Canadian representative in the Olympic golf tournament, may be the Olympic golf champion without a game.

A Canadian Associated Press cable says: "In the Olympic golf contest, a number of British entries were received by the Olympic Council but were so confused that they had to be returned for further particulars. To-day the entries closed, and the only entry fully in order was that of George S. Lyon, the Canadian champion. The competition was, therefore, abandoned, and Lyon has a walkover, and may, if he wishes, claim the medal."

The chances of Mr. Lyon claiming the medal without a contest are decidedly slim, he being a true sportsman.
