Answers to Fuzzle received as follows

We call the attention of our readers to the article of our New York correspondent, on another page, in which he deals with the question of Hospital nurses. It will be perceived that the comparison which he draws between Hospitals conducted by Sisters of Charlity and trained nurses, fully agrees with the ideas expressed in the Herald on a similar subject, a few weeks ago. The article is worthy of careful perusal.

We were shown, to-day, a very beautiful wooden altar, made by Mr. Patrick Power, of this city, for St. Michael's Church, Corran Ban Bridge. It is of the Gothic style of architecture, having the pointed arches surmounted by crosses. Its dimensions are, length eight feet; height from floor to top of middle of which it is composed is mainly whitewood and pine. It is painted white and violet, while the panels in front are in imitation of sienna and Irish marble. The sides of the arches have carved or anamons of the Society assisted by some manages of the Society assisted by some manages of the Society, and the Convent of Notre Dame was made to serve as a Chapel for the occasion. An altar of very great beauty was received at the western end, and the hall itself was tastefully decorated. A triduum had been performed by the members of the Society in preparation of the Herald on a similar subject, a few weeks ago. The article is worthy of careful perusal.

United Ireland, Parnell's organ, publishes an editorial speculation based on a supposition of the failure of Mr through Parliament. It says that if such a failure should possibly occur it would not only be a parliamentary t scandal but would be followed by a most horrible "suppressed civil war." The Liberal party, the paper continues, would be split. One portion would stand watching in helpiess shame the terrorization of Ireland; the other portion would be dragged at the chariot wheels of Brummagem Cromwell. wheels of Brummagem Cromwell. The Duke of Argyll writes a remark The Dake of Argyll writes a remark-able letter to the press, the headline of which might appropriately be "Ave, Cassar Parnell, Imperator." The duke writing obviously as one of the chief landlords, points out in detail how Parnell vote. The duke's lugubrious conclusion evidently is that Irish-Americans rule Great Britain, these siding the National League, which guides Parnell, who dictates parliamentary resultions and statutes. An explanation of the letter may be found in the fact stated in the current-number of Truth, with regard to the duke's views, that "he is suffering from a sharp attack of gout," but, if that be so, the only conclusion to be drawn is that the gout makes the duke tell the
