A Full Week.

The Premier in the House yesterday announced that the Government had no further legislation to bring in, and that he hoped that the Legislature would be prorogued on Saturday.

We have so far touched upon matters that may or may not evoke any great amount of discussion, and we have left to the last the legislation which is sure to provoke a great deal of discussion.

The Casino Theatre Opened Yesterday.

Fighting Fogs.

That London's "particular"—the yellow, peanop atmosphere which sometimes settles over the Metropolis and materially adds to doctors' banking accounts—may be abolished is the hope held out by a French scientist, M. Ouderlo, the head of the Lyons Observatory, whose novel remedy is to be put to the test at Lyons.

Whereas other scientists, however, have usually proposed to banish fogs by attacking them when they have once been formed in the air, M. Ouderlo proposes to prevent their formation by a very simple plan.

His idea is to suppress the rising of the water vapour by covering the surface of the river with a film of oil the thickness of which will prevent all evaporation.

It is expected that the Beothic and Beluventine will go North to-morrow night for scaling crews.

Doctor and Patient.

The doctor was baffled and the case seemed almost hopeless, and after many different prescriptions the patient still said that his health was not improving. The complaint was not a serious character, and after much thought a happy idea seized the doctor.

"Now, my friend, when I call upon you again will you say 'I imagine I am a little better to-day' when I inquire after your health?"

"That's right," said the doctor, "Now, the next time I call will you say 'I imagine I am a great deal better than I was the last time you called' which, accordingly, the patient did."

"Now," said the doctor, "will you call round at the surgery in a few days and say 'I imagine I am quite well now?'"

"Yes," replied the patient; "I will do so."

A week passed and the patient presented himself at the surgery as requested, and in reply to the usual inquiry, replied, "I imagine I am quite well now, sir."

"That's right," returned the doctor, "I am so pleased to see that you are."

"How much is your fee?" asked the patient.

"Five pounds," said the doctor. "Then imagine you have got it," replied the patient, as he walked out of the surgery.
