certain requirements of the Mineral

Act were not complied with before commencing the action. The plaintiffs alleged that the late Captain Alexander and his associates "jumped" the claims; and that although the defendants might have an apparently good Crown grant, this claim was nevertheless based upon a trespass in the first place; and that so long as the root of the title was bad the whole structure fell to the ground. On the other hand, the defendants rested their case large ly on the regularity of the proceed ings, and the opportunity afforded the plaintiffs to object in the early stages and their acquiescence during a long

Whenever I am at a loss for some means of amusing myself, I go to an auction sale and I can safely say that this source of entertainment has never yet failed me. I have often wondered why more people do not follow my example when they are at a loose end, for the worst grouch could not possibly be bored at a sale. And not only does one find amusement there, but there is even sufficient material for the most advanced student of human nature. Believe me, I know. It is seldom that one goes to an auction without finding a huge crowd there. A market place is to an auction sale what Charlie Chaplin's moustasche is to a Bolshevist's whiskers. In no other place could one find such a dense, seething, chattering, excited mass of fernininity. No woman can resist an auction sale, but, those who attend them are actuated by many diverse motives. Some go because they hope to be able to discuss the latest tit-bit of scandal with an acquaintance: some because they want to see what clothes the rest want to see what other people buy; some go to see what clothes the rest are wearing, and some so that they may be able to talk about the bargains they nearly got; some even go so that they may obtain some topic of conversation which they can later, spring on unsuspecting victims; very, very ew of there go for the purpose of making purchases. Now when I make this last statement I do not want to be misunderstood, because although many women may attend the sale with the intention of acting merely as spectators, a bargain is absolutely irresistible to their sex and poor hubby realizes it when he has to write a large cheque in payment for rubbish which is relegated to the attic, there to remain forever in obscurity. Auction sales have been the cause of more family quarrels than perhaps many realize. I have seen two women bidding unheard of prices for utter rubbish, just because one wants to outdo the other. This is as true, as it may sound ridiculous. But, if I even began to tell you about all the funny things that happen at auction sales I would use up an entire issue of the l'elegram. Later, I may have have more to say on the subject. (I wish all ladies to distinctly understand that I

J. Callahan and J. Power's sons of Corner Brook, returned from Upper Humber on Saturday with caribou. There are seven men and one woman hunting caribou on Hinds Plains. They had two stag caribou up to Saturday.

Caribou are reported fairly plentiful along the Willow Steady country, on the Upper Humber, but along Dear Lake there have been none up to the first of this week.

The first caribou meat to arrive from the hunting grounds was sent down by Donald Petley from Kitty's Brook on Friday. Donald is hunting at Kitty's Brook. He killed two Caribou about seven miles from the railway.-Western Star.
