Massive Screen Drama at the Nickel To-Morrow

A TWO-FISTED TALE OF A BOY WHO LEARNED THAT LOVE WAS WORTH FIGHTING FOR.

The holiday attraction at the Nickel Theatre to-morrow is "Backbone," the great Saturday Evening Post story which has thrilled millions of readers the world over. It is the type of picture which there is an ever-growing demand—straight from the shoulder drama, unspiced by false touches, powerful in story, intelligently directed and entertaining throughout.

Entertainment Plus! That's Clarence Budington Kelland's great Saturday Evening Post story done into thrilling pictures. The great lumber camps of the North Woods are a rugged and beautiful background to a heart-winning romance with its roots back in the brave old days of clashing steel. Alfred Lunt, handsome, stalwart, engaging, bringing to the screen the plaudits and ability of his stage success plays the kind of a two-fisted hero that places him immediately among the stars that fanatics will idolize. Watch him! "Backbone" was created from start to finish to line them up at the box-office. It will send the thrills through the backbone of the audience.

Wedding Bells.

HOEBERG-LUKENCHO.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on February 17th, at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, Boston, when Miss Nora Hoeborg of this city and Mr. Michael Lukenchko of Boston were united in holy bonds of matrimony. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Fr. Cronin. The bride who was neatly attired in Alice blue silk with hat to match, was attended by her niece, Miss Mollie Holland, who wore a dress of navy blue and rose silk, with hat to match. The groom was supported by Mr. Rudolph Holland, nephew of the bride. After the ceremony supper was partaken of at their future residence, 78 Chandler Street. The many friends of the happy couple wish them a long and happy wedded life.

A pretty young lady named Jane, while walking was caught in the rain. She ran—almost flew. Her complexion did, too. And she reached home exceedingly plain.

Dollar Versus Pound

"Hitherto London has been the financial centre of the world and that fact has brought wealth to England that cannot be measured in Board of Trade statistics," writes Mr. Harold Cox in the Sunday Times. "There is a certain school of economists in this country who seem to imagine that banking and commerce are matters of no account; that all that tells in our national economy is the production of material goods."

"These economic philosophers, who mostly belong to the Protectionist school, seem to imagine that as long as 'valuable things are produced it does not matter whether they are sold or not. The actual manufacturer knows better; he knows that it is useless to produce things unless they can be sold, and he also knows that the business of selling is in some ways more difficult than the business of manufacturing."

"Part of England's success in the world is due to the fact that she has developed a highly skilled commercial organization at the head of which stand the bankers of the City of London. Without the aid of this commercial and banking organization most of the labour of our industrial classes would be wasted."

"But the past success of the City of London is very largely due to the fact that for nearly a hundred years this gold value of the pound sterling was steadily maintained. Now that we have departed from gold, other countries, as Sir Harry Goschen pointed out, are beginning to seek another standard of value."

"For whatever the theorists may say about an ideal currency based upon index figures, or some other device, in practice the world still continues to measure values in gold, and because the English sovereign no longer expresses gold, Continental countries are taking as their measure the value of the American dollar. That is a serious loss, for which we may have to pay heavily if the return of the sovereign to gold parity is long delayed."

M. C. L. I. Debate

What gives promise to be something unique in debating circles will be demonstrated at the Methodist College Literary Institute, Thursday evening, March 14th. Debating is excellent training. It teaches one to think quickly and logically, not to be afraid of an audience, and is undoubtedly the best of all training in public speaking. The M.C.L.I. organized in 1887, meets every Thursday evening, during the months of January to April. An advertisement with the names of set speakers and their subject for this week will appear in the Evening Telegram and other city papers. The debate will be based on the following, "Which discovery or invention ranks first in achievement and general benefit to mankind?" All M.C.L.I. debates are open to the public, both sexes. A large attendance of members and visitors is anticipated by the executive.—S.R.P.

WALT MASON

And now that Lenin's in his grave, I ask these questions: Was he a hero or a knave, a saviour or a saint? The human puzzle lies asleep; so strange in his renown, I know not whether I should weep or kick his headstone down. I read one book with covers green which proves that he was great, the greatest man the world has seen since Caesar pulled his freight; he played a high and noble part, with virtue still in mind; he had a fond and noble part, with virtue still in mind; he has a fond and yearning heart that loved all humankind. I read a book with covers red which claims he was a wretch; the one regret, since he is dead, is that he dodged Jack Ketch. With other sinful, heartless gent he played the butcher's game, and in the blood of innocents he wallowed to his fame. I wonder should I hang a wreath upon his headstone brown, or undermine the dirt beneath, and let the blame thing down. Oh, should I sing his praises now, exalt the good and brave, or bring along my bottled owd, and stake her on his grave? We'll have to wait for many years before we can decide if he deserves regretful tears or curses deep and wide. We'll have to see dark Russia rise, or sink to lower depths, before we call this Lenin wise, or damn his name for keeps.

Nfld. Poultry Association

The March meeting was held in the Board of Trade Building last night. There were reports from twelve members for February month, showing that their birds laid 2,697 eggs. A clipping from the "Australasian" was forwarded by His Excellency the Governor, on the subject of Poultry raising in Australia. The article was read by the Vice President, Dr. Tall. Black Orpingtons and Rhode Island Reds and White Leghorns are popular breeds there. Clipping from the New York Press was also read on the subject of the recent "Madison Square Garden Show." Eggs are selling by the members at one dollar a dozen and the demand is greater than the supply. Mr. Leonard Earle of Altona, Poultry Farm, reports great success with the new breed "Black Jersey Giants," the heaviest breed of fowls grown. Two members have already spring chickens hatched. Secretary McCarter read an article on Hollywood Farms of Washington showing that by the process of eliminating the poor layers and selecting eggs from the record trap nested birds. The results increased their average production of the birds wonderfully, and they now have a record of 138 eggs each from 6,100 pullets. The reports from Truro, Nova Scotia, egg laying contest were also read. Rose Comb Rhode Island Red are leading, with White Leghorns second. During the meeting Secretary McCarter was presented with a coffee percolator and electric toaster suitably engraved, with an address from the members, as a slight appreciation of services as Secretary for the past two years. Arrangements were made by the White Leghorn breeders to advertise hatching eggs for the 1924 season now at hand. This breed is now the most popular in Newfoundland as proved at the last two years' fall exhibition. There being more of this breed exhibited than any other.
