excite international interest. Financial pundits are saying that unless France balances her Budget and stops issuing paper money, the franc will relapse to its former condition. While not underestimating the importance of these measures, it is obvious that the rapid and sensational fall in the value of the franc was due to other causes. It is admitted that American and European "bears" were prowling in the franc markets of the world. Our American Correspondent cables that the support given to the franc by Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co., the American bankers, has dealt a sore blow to at least two other big American financial houses who had been bearing the franc," and that one large group of European "bears' had been compelled to pay almost usurious rates for accommodation to enable them to meet their obligations. Last week we urged that steps should be taken to stop these speculations in currency, which are a new international danger of a terrible and subtle kind, While the Government are talking of creating a new atmosphere in
