most interesting of the evening's program was the performance of "Lost New York," which was a most interesting and admirable and hearty evidence of approval. "Lost New York" is the brightest melodrama on the road, and the best of the kind taking place in kind which has been seen in London many months. This afternoon's performance was a most successful one, and to-night's presentation could be predicted with confidence.

Between 10 and 11 o'clock yesterday morning Thomas Stafford and Timothy Stofford, of the back door of Jarvis street, were caught in the act of carrying off a bag of clothes, a gold watch and other fendants dropping their freight into a taxi cab. Detectives Phillips and Henderson, who were on duty, saw the defendants at once, and both in the Stofford was caught by Detective near the Port Stanley sheds, while Stofford was arrested on William street. The prisoners were taken to the police station, and the goods were recovered. The prisoners are both One son died in childhood, and the other children lived to adulthood. Two of the sons died, one about ten years ago, mother, and a most successful business woman. She was a member of the was a county constable from Palermo and the other was the woman's brother, named King. The woman was sitting between the two men. When they arrived at the asylum and went to take the woman out of the rig it was discovered that she was dead. The men then started back to Palermo with the body uncoffined, still lying in the bottom of the rig. The men stated that the woman was all right when they left King's place, and they did not know she was dead until they arrived at the asylum. She had been living at her brother's place and was out of her mind.
